SPOCK SERIES SLATED

At a time when the whole concept of family life, social and political structures, the ideals we have long believed in, and disciplines of every sort are under severe attack particularly by the younger generation—a 10-part series by the world's most eminent pediatrician and children's psychiatrist, Dr. Benjamin Spock, will appear in The Times Family Section starting next Saturday, Sept. 7.

Without resorting to cant or dogma and always advocating instinct over theory, encouraging the power and value of love and the sense of giving, the Spock series shows how tested principles of human relationships still pertain in a new and changing world; how mutual respect between parent and child can be established and maintained, and how the nuclear family can remain as a central, steadying base in a time of shift and change.

Spock has been writing about children since 1946. Baby and Child Care, his first book, has sold 24 million copies and has been translated into 26 languages.

Rental Crisis Grips Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The shortage of apartment space in the Victoria area has reached what municipal leaders call "crisis proportions."

And it is getting more serious every day.

Vacancy Rate Almost Nil

"Construction of apartments for rent has virtually come to a halt in the Victoria area,'" says Chris Dowling, local manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The vacancy rate is almost nil.

"A few builders are still putting up condominiums but there is no interest at all in rental apartment construction," Dowling said.

"I would be surprised to see any more large rental projects under present conditions."

The conditions in part are due to federal taxation changes but mainly are centred on a concern about the provincial government's 8 per cent rent increase limit.

"Money has no particular social conscience," Mayor Peter Pollen said today. "It will go where it can get a return on its investment. The provincial government's policies are discouraging private construction."

The effect of the provincial government's attitude is reflected in the construction figures.

Apartment construction across Canada is down 15 per cent from last year due to a shortage of mortgage funds and the end of the federal tax benefits for investing in apartments.

Construction Starts Down

However, in Victoria apartment construction starts this year are down 41 per cent from 1973. Other B.C. cities report a similar trend.

"I have come to the conclusion that the 8 per cent limit must be removed," says Saanich Mayor Ed Lum.

"The only solution to the housing crisis is to lift the 8-per cent ceiling to allow developers a fair return. This would encourage apartment construction.

"There should be some ceiling, but with the rate of inflation running at 12 per cent or more, an 8 per cent ceiling is not reasonable."

The official count shows that you can expect to find only one vacancy in a 200-suite apartment building. And you have to move quickly.

These appeared in Tuesday's Times:

"Emergency! It's the street for us . . ."

"$50 reward to finder of house, duplex or suite . . ."

—"Help! Mother and six children desperately need . . ."

Many Renters Desperate

There were 15 ads by people desperately needing a house to rent and another 10 seeking an apartment. A year ago no one would think of advertising for an apartment. They didn't have to.

However, Tuesday there were only 15 ads offering unfurnished apartments to rent, down from 62 ads on the same day in 1973.

There were 10 ads offering furnished apartments, down from 34 a year ago.

The apartment shortage is even worse than it appears on the surface. While 1,046 apartment units were started in the Greater Victoria area this year, almost all of them were for condominiums, not for rent.

However, the total includes a 38-unit condominium in Esquimalt and a 30-unit condominium in Victoria.

Apartment starts in July totalled 30, down from 101 the previous July.

Contributing to the apartment shortage is the conversion rate to condominiums. Apartments can be constructed for sale as condominiums, but special permission must be granted by the municipality before an existing rental apartment can be converted to a condominium.

In that connection, Mayor Lum has bad news for apartment owners.

Tough Stand in Saanich

"While the present crisis continues, Saanich will take a very tough stand with owners trying to convert rental units to strata title (condominiums). The shortage is bad enough as it is."

He said Saanich city hall is receiving a large number of calls from people seeking rental accommodations and he has to tell them there is virtually nothing available.

The shortage is most acute at the University of Victoria where there are only 600 beds in dormitories and a student waiting list of 500.

"We stopped taking applications in May and there are a lot more than 500 students looking for accommodation," says Shirley Baker, co-ordinator of student housing.

About 300 rooms have been located in houses in the area but some students are going to have to travel across town, some from as far away as Colwood.

"The response from the public has been gratifying but we still need more rooms," she said.

Elsewhere in the city any rental accommodation is being snapped up as quickly as it becomes available, particularly if the rent is below $200.

Mayor Pollen places the

MUSK OX FOR MOSCOW

MONTREAL (CP) — Ten musk oxen from the Canadian Arctic are to be flown to the Soviet Union today, the first step of a Soviet attempt to reintroduce the species in Siberia.

The six female and four male oxen will be set free on Siberia's Taymyr peninsula. Musk oxen have been extinct in the Soviet Union for 2,000 years.

It is expected the oxen will survive in Siberia, becoming a source of meat and wool for the natives of the peninsula. About 10,000 oxen live under similar conditions on the Canadian Arctic islands off Ellesmere, Melville and Banks.

Munro Handling Grain?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro today made a "public plea for rationality" among employers and 550 grain handlers in a deadlocked labor dispute that has blocked the flow of grain from this west coast port since Aug. 26.

The minister told a news conference he will continue to meet with parties that have a direct interest in the dispute before returning to Ottawa today but he would not identify to whom he will be talking.

He also reiterated the federal government's stand that parliament will not be called into session before the scheduled Sept. 30 to legislate an end to the dispute.

"I'm not issuing a plea on one hand and a threat on the other," said the minister who was accompanied on his trip here by his deputy Tom Eberlee.

Munro called on the Grain Workers Union and the five elevator companies to take a more rational, dispassionate look at the report prepared by conciliator Dr. Neil Perry.

If the dispute drags on until Parliament opens, the outcome is a foregone conclusion because the government has committed itself to the recommendations of the Perry report.

The minister said that if the grain companies intend to procrastinate and wait for Parliament to implement the conditions of the Perry report to embarrass the Liberals, "the government is prepared to be embarrassed."

Asked if the government has plans to take over grain handling, Munro said that possibility has been looked at but not endorsed.

Metro Stays Closed

MONTREAL (CP) — Traffic on city streets was slow again today following the return to classes of 230,000 public school students in the absence of subway service.

Only 1,375 of the city's 1,900 buses were on the roads because of the 29-day walkout by maintenance workers, a transit commission spokesman said, adding that there will definitely be no subway service until the 1,600 workers return to work.

A police spokesman said there were no more road accidents than usual because of the strike although traffic, especially in the city's east end, was bad.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUCTC) said more than 10,000 public school students were without bus transportation because the commission faces a shortage of buses and cannot spare enough for them.

Meanwhile, a provincial labor department spokesman said Tuesday the Quebec government has no immediate plans to pass legislation to end the strike.

The strikers already have defied a Quebec Superior Court injunction ordering them back to work. The union and some of its members were fined $54,050 for contempt of court for disobeying the Aug. 8 injunction.

The spokesman said commission lawyers will seek additional contempt of court charges against 23 union members previously fined.

The commission has refused the union's request to reopen negotiations on a wage contract which does not expire until July 1975. The men currently earn between $3.50 and $5.50.

The almost month-long strike has sent an estimated 500,000 peopple who use the subway daily scurrying to find alternate means of transportation. About one million people use the transit system daily.

Meanwhile, Toronto's 23-day transit strike ended today but a bristling new issue immediately sprouted.

Several workers have grown beards during the 23-day layoff and plan to return to the job with them. But the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) frowns on beards.

Most of the 5,700 members of Division 113, Amalgamated Transit Union, took part in secret balloting Tuesday. Of the 4,838 members who voted, 78 per cent were in favor of returning to work.

Commission officials reported that full service resumed by 6 a.m. today, although subway trains might be less frequent than normal during peak hours. All-night bus, tram and trolley routes started at midnight Tuesday night.

For four days, the workers had defied a law passed in the Ontario legislature ordering them back to work. Whether the TTC will seek permission from the Ontario Labor Relations Board to prosecute the workers individually or the union as a whole was still unanswered Tuesday night.

'Fun Gun' Upsets Police

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The salesman calls it a "fun gun" but Vancouver police are suspicious of the customers to whose sense of humor it may appeal.

The "fun gun" is a working replica of the famed Thompson .45 submachine gun. It fires real bullets.

However, because it only fires them one at a time the gun is officially in the same class as semi-automatic hunting rifles and sales of the $195 gun are legal.

Gunstore proprietor Al Peters, who has sold three of the weapons, suggests they will be used to mutilate tin cans in the bush.

With the price of ammunition for the gun at $15 for 50 rounds, however, this would be an expensive pastime.

It's a deadly looking weapon, but there is nothing illegal about it, a police officer said Tuesday.

The .45 calibre gun has two hand grips, an ammunition clip with 30 rounds and is 37 inches long. It is made in Knoxville, Tennessee, by Commando Arms Inc. which claims to have sold 16,000 of the guns in the past four years.

The Vancouver police official said the Commando Mark III is the same gun converted by Symbionese Liberation Army into an automatic weapon, a claim denied by the manufacturer of the gun.

The gun is being sold as a hunting rifle the police official said, "But I can't see what use it could be to any hunter."

Turkey Vows Reprisals For Cyprus Massacres

Times News Services

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — More bodies were dug up today from a grave at the Turkish-Cypriot village of Maratha, and the Turks reported two more massacres in which they said 158 Turkish-Cypriots may have died.

Officers of the United Nations peace force counting skulls removed from a garbage pit outside Maratha said 84 men, women and children had been buried in the grave. Survivors in the village 12 miles northwest of Famagusta said the victims were Turkish-Cypriots slain by Greek-Cypriot gunmen.

The Greek-Cypriot government of President Glafkos Clerides contended that the corpses might be those of Greek-Cypriots missing in the district. A Nicosia newspaper said a medallion found on one of the bodies belonged to a Greek-Cypriot woman who lived six miles from Maratha and was missing with her seven-year-old son.

A Greek Cypriot spokesman charged the Turks with a "desperate effort to divert the attention of world opinion from the suffering and evils brought about by their invasion of Cyprus."

The spokesman said, however, the Greek Cypriots are "willing to provide any facility to the United Nations for an on-the-spot investigation, in the presence of representatives from both sides."

Turkish-Cypriot defence minister, Osman Orek, told reporters he has been informed of two more alleged massacres.

He said 96 Turkish-Cypriots were missing from villages near the south coast and were believed buried in Palodhia, but Greek-Cypriot police there refused to let UN investigators search for the grave.

Orek also said that he has information that 62 Turkish-Cypriot civilians from Timi, west of Limassol, have been killed and buried in that area.

The Clerides government has called for an independent investigation by the UN force and the International Red Cross of all atrocity reports, and vice-President Rauf Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community, said he would welcome the inquiry. But nothing has been done about getting it started.

Calm Returns To Newark

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Sniper fire and looting marked a third straight day of disorders in New Jersey's largest city. Police said another 12 policemen and five civilians received minor injuries.

Relative calm returned to this city of 400,000 about midnight Tuesday night.

Police said about 15 stores were looted Tuesday as bands of youths, most of them Puerto Rican, rampaged through the streets.

JURY BLAMES DEAD TEEN

Driver 'Bugged Into' Death Drag Race

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A 20-year-old Saanich man said Tuesday he was "bugged into" a high speed drag race on the Pat Bay Highway in which three young people were killed Aug. 10.

"I did it to get away from them," Brian Allen Murphy, 3220 Quadra, told a coroner's jury inquiring into the deaths of Paul Young, 17, of Lower Kippens, Nfld., Dana Lucian Tower, 17, of 1412 Taunton, and Janice Moyes, 16, of 121 Kamloops.

Murphy said the youths had followed him as he drove north on the highway shortly after 3:30 a.m. inciting him to drag by changing from one lane to another, gunning the motor and flashing headlights.

He said when he turned around at Elk Lake to come back home the car sped up alongside him.

"I became really annoyed, so I stepped on the gas," he said.

The two cars, reaching speeds Murphy estimated at 90 mph, raced neck and neck until just before the Royal Oak overpass when he slowed down and then watched the death car veer out of control into a rock wall.

The two woman, four man jury determined Paul Young, the presumed driver of the car, was criminally negligent in the operation of the vehicle.

They cited dangerous driving on the part of Murphy but added the race was "a result of harassment by the driver of the Olds (the death car) and its occupants."

The jury deliberated one hour before delivering findings to Coroner Edmond St. Jorre at five minutes past midnight. It followed a four hour hearing which centered mainly on Murphy's testimony.

The inquest was into its third day after having been adjourned Aug. 26.

Murphy said he first saw the trio driving in a 1967 Oldsmobile in the Town and Country parking lot.

"They were squealing tires and making asses of themselves," he said.

He left the lot when he heard a number of cars had collected for drag races on the highway near Vanaiman and went to watch.

However, the rumor proved false so he decided "to take a run out the highway".

"That's when the Olds pulled up beside me. The driver started to jump his car — putting his foot on the gas pedal to make it jump — and challenge me to a drag."

He sped away from the car twice, he said, then did a U-turn in the road at Elk Lake.

"The Olds passed me doing about a 100 mph, went through an amber flashing light, and out of sight. I headed back home."

He had not gone far when the Olds was along side him again.

"I heard screaming. I didn't know what was going on. The driver kept bouncing the front end of his car."

He said he "tried to get away, but the Olds kept up with him.

On the downward sweep to the Royal Oak overpass he said he slowed, fearing a radar trap on the other side of the bridge.

He estimated he was 300 yards behind the Olds when it crashed.

"I don't know whether the driver was trying to switch lanes or what. When the car hit there were pieces flying everywhere."

His testimony varied from that of Darlene Evelyn Anderson, the driver of a car the two had passed on the highway.

She said the cars raced past her when she was opposite the Royal Oak Inn and saw both disappear together around the corner under the overpass.

Strikes Disrupt Interior Schools

CASTLEGAR, (CP) — Nelson was the only school district in the West Kootenay unpicketed by non-teaching staff, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees today.

CUPE members in Trail, Grand Forks and at Selkirk College in Castlegar joined Castlegar workers this morning in picketing the British Columbia School Trustees Association.

Union spokesman Clarence Lacombe said today no meetings with management have been planned and the next move will have to be made by them. Lacombe said the only way the BCSTA could resolve the strike is by offering the workers more money.

CUPE members in Nelson Tuesday rejected the latest management offer but have not yet gone out on strike.

The striking workers are seeking a one-year contract, or a two-year contract with a cost-of-living adjustment.

Lacombe said the latest offer to the union was a two-year contract with a 13 per cent increase, retroactive to July 1, and additional increases of nine per cent in March and November, 1975.

In the East Kootenay, Windermere, Kimberley, Fernie and Creston CUPE members were on strike.

Meanwhile in the Okanagan, another four school districts were disrupted Tuesday as a CUPE strike closed two districts and curtailed attendance in two others.

About 17,000 B.C. students got an extended summer vacation as the schools failed to open.

The Vernon and Shuswap districts were closed while those in Penticton, Summerland and Kelowna opened for registration. Only the Penticton district offered full school bus service, because drivers there are not members of the union.

Vernon school board chairman Al Mickelson said Tuesday that the five Okanagan districts were attempting to arrange a meeting between themselves before further negotiations with CUPE.

Ten districts in the Okanagan and the Kootenays are involved in the dispute with CUPE.

Earlier, Mickelson called for government intervention in the dispute, but CUPE Secretary-Treasurer Andy Carmichael, representing Okanagan locals, said Tuesday his local was against intervention at this time.

Carmichael said Okanagan workers are seeking parity with Kamloops workers, who recently won settlements of between 15½ and 25½ per cent, depending on classification.

In the previous contract, which expired June 30, the rate for a basic custodian was $3.90 an hour while the rate for a journeyman tradesman was $5.12.

'Crisis Proportion' Rental

"There is only so much a municipality can do. The provincial government is the source of most of the funding. Anything we do as a municipality tends to put an undue burden on property taxpayers."

He said the provincial department of housing is far too slow to get into gear.

"Our very, very pink government seems more obsessed with driving out private developers than in providing housing itself."

Besides taking a second look at the 8 per cent rent increase ceiling, the province should buy large areas of land and install services quickly if it is serious about moving into housing in a big way, the mayor said.

"I have been trying for a year to get action from the province on development of the very fine Highland district. They have just hired a consultant and that's all that has happened in 12 months.",

He said the government could attack the problem by providing serviced land in Metchosin, Colwood and the Highlands and possibly even in Saanich.

If it assembled the land, serviced it and gave some encouragement to private builders the crisis could be alleviated.

"Their present policy of building co-op housing 38 units at a time isn't even cosmetics."

The city was under pressure because of a growth rate of about 3.5 per cent due in part to internal migration from other provinces and the government was letting the construction industry stagnate in the housing sector, Mayor Pollen said.

Wayne Farmer, president of the British Columbia Construction Association, said investors had lost interest in rental apartments.

He said with money scarce due to a shortage of mortgaging funds, there is very little construction of any kind planned in multiple-family homes.

"Because of rent controls I would be very surprised to see any more (rental) apartments constructed in this area. It isn't a good investment at this time."

Drag Race Ends in Death

"I couldn't believe it. The car had been split in two. I stopped and sat there in shock."

She said when the cars passed her they were "sort of weaving, like in a drag race".

But Murphy, who said he had competed in more than a 100 legal drag races in Mission and Seattle, denied either his car or the Olds had "fish-tailed".

Saanich Const. Robert Emery said the Olds left a 432 foot skid mark on the pavement and bounced 116 feet along a ditch before striking the rock bluff about a quarter mile from the overpass.

The body of Janice Moyes was 40 feet from the scene of impact, that of Paul Young 50 feet, he said.

The rear wheel assembly travelled 65 feet and the cab of the car 200 feet.

Dana Lucian Tower ended up 80 feet across the road and 230 feet from the impact, on the northbound lane of the highway.

St. Jorre said results of chemical analyses on the bodies of the youths showed a .04 blood alcohol level in Towers, but no trace of alcohol or drugs in the other two. (A reading of .08 blood alcohol is normally considered impairment.)

He said evidence adduced showed only Towers had a driver's licence, and a learner's certificate at that.

He told the jury he could find no reference in the Motor Vehicle Act to racing of cars on provincial highways.

He said the law only prohibits racing of horses.

"Nevertheless, racing is indefensible, and criminal," he added.

He noted Murphy's car was not equipped with a speedometer and said it was a breach of the Motor Vehicle regulations.

St. Jorre, in a one hour summation charging the jurors, gave them four options. They could find the drivers or drivers were criminally negligent, driving dangerously, driving carelessly, or they could deem the mishap a pure "accident."

The jury made one recommendation — that the defensive driving course which is available to most high school students should be issued to people applying for learner's driver's licences.

"We feel the photographs and knowledge given in the course would be helpful in stopping this sort of thing from happening again . . . or at least curbing it."

Calgary Oil Man Hoping To Form 'Canada Party'

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary oil man says he hopes to from a free-enterprise federal political party to represent the interests of producers of raw materials within the next few months.

J. P. Gallagher, president of Dome Petroleum Ltd., said his proposal to establish a party known as "The Canada Party" has the support of "35-40 prominent members of the Liberal, Conservative and Social Credit parties."

He said he has received financial support from the West, Ontario and the Maritimes for the formation of the party, which he said will hold a general meeting before the end of the year.

He said the party would be made up of representatives of the forestry, fisheries, agricultural and mining industries, as well as oil and natural gas producers.

"These people really don't have a voice in this country," he said.

"Under present circumstances, the party that is asked to form the government has only one choice — to align itself with the NDP.

the weather

At several points in B.C. Tuesday maximum temperatures were the highest ever recorded on Sept. 3. Included in the list were localities in the central interior. A repeat performance is not likely in that area today as a surge of cool air from the Yukon will plunge steadily southward and should reach the vicinity of Williams Lake this evening. This fresh air intrusion will penetrate into the north mainland region Thursday but is not expected to affect southern B.C. However, maritime air pushing through Juan de Fuca Strait will lead to cooler temperatures along the inner south coast.

Lower Stumpage Rates Welcomed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lumber industry spokesmen said Tuesday they are pleased with stumpage rate changes that will help B.C. interior operations but expressed hopes that similar relief is on the way for coastal operations.

"There's no doubt the change in the stumpage payment system will help the interior lumber industry," Fred Moonen, Council of Forest Industries of B.C. vice-president, said.

Moonen, summarizing the reactions of other CFI officials, said the new system announced at the weekend by Premier Dave Barrett in Kamloops, means interior operators will now pay stumpage rates closer to the sharply reduced prices they are now receiving for their lumber.

Barrett, acting on a recommendation from Resources Minister Bob Williams, said hte new system, effective immediately, means stumpage rates charged B.C.'s interior companies will be based on the preceding month's lumber prices, instead of being based on a three-month average.

Moonen said lumber prices have slumped around 40 per cent in the last few months and retaining the three-month price average for stumpage rates meant lumber mills were paying rates far in excess of current selling prices.

He said coast lumber operators are facing the same price-cut situation and are hoping the NDP government will change the stumpage rate system for them as well.

CFI president Gordon Draeseke and other industry spokesmen, met with Williams last week to discuss the worsening industry slump.

Moonen said the lumber industry throughout B.C. has laid off, or is in the process of laying off more than 9,000 workers.

Williams has said there is an extremely serious situation in the industry.

He assured Draeseke and other delegates at last week's sessions he was aware of the industry's probems and would consider what might be done to alleviate them.

Draeseke said at the same time, the minister gave no dates or details on what action the government would take to help the coastal operators.

Victoria West Apartments Must Pay 'Trespass' Fee

Two developers of apartments in Victoria West will be required to "legitimize a trespass" by leasing from the federal ministry of transport foreshore land which they have occupied illegally for several years, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

Pollen told reporters the firms are Amon Investments Ltd. and Diamond Developments Ltd., owners of the Princess Patricia and Seagate apartments respectively.

He said indications from the MoT's regional office in Vancouver that the firm's foreshore status will have to be covered by a lease is welcome news for the city, as it will be a method of guaranteeing public access to that part of the waterfront.

The hassle dates back to 1971 and the discovery, during construction of the Seagate apartment, that Diamond Developments had encroached on federally-owned foreshore by dumping fill.

A few months later the city asked the federal authorities to investigate another possible trespass by the Princess Patricia apartment, completed about seven years earlier.

The matter was raised in the House of Commons by then-MP David Anderson, and a thorough investigation promised by transport minister Don Jamieson.

Pollen said Tuesday he is not aware what the lease figure will be, and added that he doubts it will be applied retroactively. No MoT spokesman could be reached for confirmation today.

Access to the waterfront skirting the two apartments is considered necessary for the city's long-range plan to develop a pedestrian walkway along the Victoria West waterfront.

Stories Conflict On Arab Attack

By the Associated Press

The Israeli military command reported today that a Palestinian Arab attempt to seize hostages in a northern Israeli village was foiled in a pre-dawn battle in which two Palestinian guerrillas and two Israeli soldiers were killed.

A Palestinian group in Damascus, however, claimed the guerrillas had taken an undisclosed number of Jewish hostages and were demanding the release of Palestinian and other prisoners held in Israeli jails.

The Popular Democratic Front guerrilla group admitted that two guerrillas and several hostages were killed in a shootout with Israeli troops but maintained that other guerrillas are holding hostages.

The command reported that two other Israeli soldiers were injured in the brief battle that brought to four the number of guerrilla deaths this week. The Israelis had earlier reported the killing of two Arabs sent across the Lebanese border to kidnap Israeli civilians Monday night.

A military spokesman categorically denied a claim by the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine in Damascus that guerrillas had taken Israeli hostages and were demanding the release of 12 prisoners, including Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji.

The archbishop is awaiting trial on charges of smuggling arms from Lebanon to Israel for guerrillas.

Two other Israeli soldiers were wounded in the clash, which raised the guerrilla toll to four this week. Two Arabs sent across the Lebanese border to kidnap Israeli civilians were killed Monday night, the command announced earlier.

An army patrol intercepted the guerrillas today in the village of Fassuta, 2½ miles south of the border and about the same distance from the town of Maalot, where Arab terrorists killed 22 Israeli students and wounded 73 others last May.

The Arabs took refuge in the cemetery and the Israelis attacked from the shelter of a nearby olive grove. Each side used grenades, and the fight lasted only a few minutes.

The entire northern Galilee area was placed on the alert.

Meanwhile, official sources in south Lebanon reported that 30 Israeli commandos invaded a Lebanese border village early today, conducted a house-to-house search and kidnapped one villager.

He was the third Lebanese taken in three consecutive nights of cross-border raids by Israeli forces in the area of the villages of Dheira and Eita el Shaab, the sources said.

The raiders also took 15 rifles and machine-guns from Dheira, the informants reported.

U.K. Military Near Revolt?

LONDON (Reuter) — The British Army was embarrassed today by a serving soldier's claim that military chiefs distrust the Labor government and are prepared to defy its orders in certain circumstances.

In an article in the journal of the right-wing Monday Club, the soldier writing under the pseudonym of Andrew Sefton says that a Portuguese-style takeover is unlikely but that there is a point beyond which even the British Army will not go.

The defence ministry refused today to comment on the affair but confirmed that it is seeking to identify the author. It was a breach of army regulations to write for publication without the prior permission of a commanding officer, the spokesman said.

The soldier relates his observations to the situation last May when Protestants staged a political strike in Northern Ireland, where he has apparently served.

He says senior army officers were then extremely unwilling to use troops to break the strike as had been decided in principle by the government.

The soldier-author says the troops did eventually act effectively but he considers the army-government disagreement as most significant.

"For the first time the army decided it was right, that it knew best, and the politicians had better toe the line," he says. "The consequences of this are yet to be fully appreciated.

"The government has at its disposal an army with an experience in countering urban guerrilla warfare greater than any other comparable force in the world.

"In an era when industrial action has become a threat to the very existence of the country, and when the possibility of having to use troops has become a probability, then it must be a cause for considerable concern that the army and the government are not in a relationship of mutual trust."

Breathing Space on Highway 12

The barricades have been torn down, the Mounties are back to regular duty and Highway 12 near Cache Creek is open to the public after a tense weekend. Ten years ago an Indian roadblock was as unthinkable as the Indians beating the cavalry in a Hollywood epic. But Wounded Knee in South Dakota and the Kenora park occupation in Ontario have signalled a change in Indian attitudes. After generations of living in rural ghettoes and being wards of the federal government Indians are becoming militant.

It is hard to blame them since their shame is ours too. The Cache Creek barricades focused on the need for 20 new houses on the reserve. But housing was only a symptom of a far greater frustration borne of poverty, high unemployment, and government control thousands of miles away. Whether Indian, white, black or yellow, however, no group of individuals have the right to arm themselves and barricade the highways. Without some sensitive negotiations between the band chief and an RCMP inspector, last weekend could have ended in bloodshed.

Reports suggested that most of the gun-toting people were American militants or Indians from Alberta and Saskatchewan. So what? If the reports are true they came only because they had an opportunity to exploit and publicize a situation long neglected by governments.

But the federal government is too convenient a whipping boy. Part of the blame rests with the Indians. Across the country native people have successfully taken on the federal government in the courts over land claims. If this kind of action can be done in the courts, then why must the Indians load their rifles over 20 houses? It sounds as though native legal sophistication has been matched by their public relations.

Now that the barricades have been removed, Ottawa will probably negotiate with the Indians, and some of the demanded housing may be forthcoming. Is that the future scenario? When the Indians brandish weapons the government gets serious? It is not enough.

The basic problem is not a matter of 20 houses, residence in parkland, netting spawning salmon, or all the types of incidents that have ruffled racial feelings in recent years. The basic problem of a submerged race that still has difficulty — psychological, social, educational, economic — in merging with an imposed white culture has never been really grappled with. The answer does not lie merely in money handouts, or building houses, or providing or prohibiting liquor as the case may be — it embraces all these things and much more fundamental issues too.

There is no easy solution, but there must be a better one than fumbling, arguing, patching up and getting little farther ahead.

The federal government should give this high priority — votes or no votes. Other countries do not look at us as admiringly as we regard ourselves and our approach to domestic problems.

". . . waiter, there's a caterpillar, a fly, three elm bark beetles, five red ants, a robin's egg and a maple leaf in my soup . . ."

Egg On The Face

Not only are Canadians from coast to coast paying nearly twice as much for eggs as Americans do, but domestic egg processors can not buy frozen or dried eggs at 42 cents per dozen — a 15-cent increase above last week's price — because the Canadian egg-marketing agency has contracted with American egg processors for deliveries at 35 cents per dozen. That more than eggs are going rotten on CEMA seems to be a strong possibility.

It was the revelation that nine million eggs worth $750,000 rotted in a Quebec warehouse and had to be destroyed which focused public attention on CEMA. Nor did federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan help matters by his gratuitous comment that the eggs did not represent a "large quantity" and the total was "only one-third of an egg for each Canadian." Mr. Whelan did concede that the CEMA should shoulder part of the blame for the rotten eggs but he reserved most of his wrath for the province of Quebec and the inadequate storage facilities it provided. Despite the agriculture minister's concern for producers, his attitude towards taxpaying consumers amounts to little more than a shrug.

Even more damning for CEMA, the Food Prices Review Board suggests that federal and provincial government policies encourage egg production at a time when egg consumption is dropping. It has also been revealed that CEMA almost went bankrupt earlier this summer only to be quietly bailed out by a $10-million federal loan. If the Canadian taxpayer is going to fund CEMA he should at least be able to expect comparable prices throughout the nation and an efficient operation without waste.

It is obvious that Humpty Dumpty in the form of CEMA has taken a great fall and all the government's forces should not try to put it together again, at least in its old form. The function of marketing is to ensure an equitable return to producers, an adequate supply and fair retail prices for consumers. CEMA appears to have done almost the exact opposite.

Mr. Whelan says he will take the board's power away if it is found to be involved in unwarranted rip-offs. That is only slightly reassuring at this point, considering the government's defence of the board in the past. At this juncture only a complete investigation into the board's policies and marketing procedures will satisfy the public and processors.

Risks Minimal, Rewards High

This is my first visit to Victoria, B.C. and Western Canada in general. My home is in Connecticut, U.S.A., on the east coast, and I am male and 21 years old. This is not my first hitch-hiking trip and will not be my last. I have personally hitched thousands of miles "by thumb" and will undoubtedly travel more, and I have many friends both male and female who have done the same. So I know what I'm talking about from personal experience. May I make the following points concerning hitch-hiking:

1. From my experience, it is the best possible way to come into contact with people from all walks of life while travelling, which is, as far as I'm concerned, what travelling is all about. The people who pick me up are always friendly and courteous, in their own manner, and will frequently go out of their way to assist me, even taking me to their homes to meet their families; share a meal and put me up for the night.

2. Never has my life been overtly threatened by anyone who has picked me up. The only time I have ever had trouble is the one time I was picked up by a drinking driver whose condition I failed to detect, but soon discovered, and terminated quickly using techniques I have learned. Anyone who stops to pick me up who, in my judgment, does not come up to my standards I graciously refuse. I have heard stories from fellow hitchers who have had trouble with their drivers but got out of it using the proper methods that one can easily learn from other hitchers and from the many books published on the subject.

3. When one looks at the many young people who hitch-hike and the millions of miles they travel and compare that to the number of incidents that occur, the ratio is extremely low. It is true that there are many unstable people behind the wheel, the number of decent people is astronomical in comparison, therefore your odds of meeting an unstable personality are quite remote.

Which brings me to the problem of young single women hitching alone. I am definitely against it. They are asking for trouble, and are much more likely to come into trouble than any other kind of hitch-hiker. While I do know personally some women who can take care of themselves in that kind of situation, a much better alternative for young women who desire to hitch would be to hitch with a male companion or another girl, in which case they both must be very cautious in the rides they accept.

4. In regards to legislation and education concerning hitch-hiking: any blanket prohibition of hitch-hiking is of dubious legality, difficult to enforce, and most important — patently unfair to those of us who have chosen hitch-hiking as our preferred method of travel, well aware of the risks we are taking, reaping the rewards which are great, using common sense and obeying the simple and direct rules of the road which make those risks so minimal and the rewards so great.

While there are many young hitch-hikers who fail to obey these rules or use common sense, the only thing I can suggest is that they be educated and made aware of these rules and be urged to exercise common sense. There are many legislative approaches to hitch-hiking that have been taken by states in America and several countries in Europe, where "auto-stopping" as it is called has been an accepted means of travelling for many years.

In Poland, for example, they register hitch-hikers and issue them with lottery tickets to reward the driver who picks them up. This approach to hitch-hiking is already in legislative action in several states, Wyoming for example. In Washington, just across the border, hitch-hiking has been legalized on all roads except inter-state highways, and a referendum, in a recent state-wide election to repeal that law failed by a great margin, reflecting the people's opinion on hitch-hiking. So there are many legislative approaches to hitch-hiking other than total prohibition.

In summary, I would like to say that hitch-hiking is a legitimate mode of travelling, providing an educational window to the world through contact with other people, and while incidents, sometimes tragic, have occurred, the incidents can be reduced to a minimum by a co-operative effort between the public, the driver, the hitch-hiker, the law enforcement agencies and the media. May I also take this time to lend my experience and opinions to any group, or legislative efforts working in the aforementioned co-operative areas. Write me: — Geof Logan, 4 Willow Drive, Weston, Ct., 06880. U.S.A.

HAROLD GREER

A Start on the Beginning

TORONTO — The key words in Ontario politics today are "Liberal revival." The Liberals would like to see this read "Liberal revival!" — that is, a phenomenon already underway. But "Liberal revival?" is a more accurate summation of the political realities.

Even as a question mark, it represents a significant up-turn in Liberal prospects. A year ago the Ontario Liberal Party was a hopeless proposition: tacitly leaderless, fractious, disorganized and out-of-touch. As a credible alternative to the long-in-power Conservatives, it was not to be taken seriously.

Today all that has changed. While it would be too strong to say that credibility has been achieved, voters everywhere are looking at the Liberals expectantly. In one form or another, the question "What about the Liberals?" dominates the political mood.

Davis Disliked

The reason is not what the Liberals have done in the past year but what the government has done — proving again the old axiom that governments are not so much elected as defeated. Everywhere one goes, one finds enormous numbers of persons mad at Premier William Davis and his Conservatives. The complaints are sometimes specific — the entire school system, for example, seems to be full of Davis haters — but there is also a general dissatisfaction, a feeling that the Conservatives have run out of gas, aren't up to the job, and have been too long at the trough.

Given this state of mind, it is a small and inevitable step to the question: "What about the Liberals?" This reporter has lost count of the persons over the past three or four months who have said in effect: "Davis is for it next time if the Liberals can measure up." There is, significantly, no talk about the NDP, which is perhaps an indication of how strongly the anti-government tide is running. In the past, the protest vote has tended to promote the NDP and the more the NDP got promoted, the more the mass of Ontario voters, who are essentially conservative and anti-radical, became alarmed. That the protesters are now thinking Liberal is something the Conservatives haven't really had to face during the past 31 years of Tory rule, and it is the one thing they have always dreaded.

"Next time," however, is probably still a year away, unless the government decides an early election would be expedient, and anything can happen to change the voters' mood. In the meantime, the Liberals are at least doing all they can do: they have read the current mood correctly and they are feverishly trying to satisfy it. They are trying to become not a question but an answer.

This is no mean exercise, considering that it was only last October that Ontario Liberals held a leadership convention which demonstrated to the entire province that they were entitled only to either mirth or pity.

ROBERT NIXON
. . . giving it a try

The party went into that convention having spent the two years since the 1971 election in the doldrums, a condition caused largely by Leader Robert Nixon's announcement, soon after the 1971 defeat, that he wanted out. Mr. Nixon meant it and woull have quit had any credible successor presented himself. None did, and Mr. Nixon then had to be persuaded, and persuade himself, that he should change his mind. Even so, the convention of last October should have been no contest, considering the qualifications of those who decided to oppose him.

In fact, it took three ballots to produce a Nixon win and then with only 59 per cent of the delegates behind him. The party showed itself to be bitterly divided, frustrated by 30 years of defeat, full of members who were ignorant of provincial politics and blind to Liberal opportunities.

This reporter commented at the time that the condition appeared to be so advanced as to be beyond repair, by Mr. Nixon or anyone else, and I am still of that opinion. But of Robert Nixon it must be said that he is certainly giving it the old college try.

He has re-organized and enlarged his personal staff. He has created something called the Ontario Liberal Council, and even got it put in the party's constitution, so he is less dependent on the old party structure which was — and is — notoriously orientated to federal rather than provincial politics. He has encouraged serious talk about setting up a purely provincial Liberal party, and has excited newcomer interest thereby. He has established "policy support groups" to generate some thinking on policy which significantly include many non-Liberals.

Impossible

He has taken to touring areas of the province, showing the flag, meeting the local press and party stalwarts, and talking to prospective candidates. Significantly, he now takes along on these trips a presentable lieutenant from the Legislative caucus, the better to answer the old and chronic comment that, "Bob Nixon's okay, but who's he got?"

At this stage, it is impossible to say just who or what Mr. Nixon has got. It is said that all manner of important people are offering themselves as candidates and only wait for the right moment to declare themselves. It is said that the party's policy convention in Windsor next February will be a humdinger and show the voters that the Liberals are ready for the challenge.

But the concrete evidence of revival has so far been slim. It consists largely of a "think-tank" session at McMaster University this past month at which there were many bright new faces and much intense discussion. For the voters at large, "Liberal revival" is still a question-mark.

'Haves' and 'Don't-Want-Its'

Peter Thomson

OTTAWA — Canada's East-West controversy has many variations and facets. Challenged to provide a couple of examples of how the Liberals govern for "the East" one prairie farmer came up with these:

1. Unemployment insurance: He doesn't pay premiums and is not eligible to receive benefits. If it was an insurance scheme, he says, he would have no complaint with it. But, about $1 billion a year goes out of general revenues into the unemployment insurance fund. The farmer does pay taxes, so he contributes indirectly to unemployment insurance. He doesn't think it is fair.

2. Federal grants: Local Initiatives, winter works, Opportunities for Youth, etc. Example: an arena in Richmond Hill, Ontario, was built with a big assist from a federal grant. Barney Danson, the new Urban Affairs Minister, took considerable pride during the election campaign in noting his efforts on behalf of the community in getting that grant. Out west, when they wanted an arena in the farmer's community they built it. They did not expect and did not particularly want any federal grant. They like to do things for themselves, entirely with local financing.

When that question is asked in Ottawa the answer invariably is that the people of the western community are stupid if they don't take advantage of federal grants, and they are even more stupid if they are too proud to want one.

Maybe so. But somehow they seem like decent people, even if they have initiative.

As an added note to the above commentary, Mayor Benoit of Ottawa announced recently the appointment of a person in charge of inter-governmental relations whose main job will be to study all federal and provincial legislation to make sure Ottawa does not miss out on any available grants.

Preserve the Best

The City of Victoria should preserve Roslyn.

A city is, after all, an accumulation of what we were, as well as what we are: hopefully, if not consistently, the best of both. It is time a halt was called to the plundering of this city's past before there is nothing left of it at all.

During my lifetime the destruction has been relentless. It could be argued that there was no alternative in the face of economic necessity, even if that included the family residence of Sir James Douglas. The Rithet estate, Gisburne, Fernhill; the Victorian brick house of Margaret Jenkins; Edwardian houses along Cook, between Richardson and Fort: the list is endless and depressing.

Again, it could be argued that some of these houses, unlike Roslyn, were not worth preserving. Unfortunately, nothing that has matched their style, charm, and the unique architecture that characterized 19th century creative imagination, has, for all our 20th century expertise, replaced them. Surely future generations will hardly be impressed by architectural memorials to a Colonial past such as Mulek's towers.

Parkman House, in Boston, 149 years old, and like Roslyn in excellent condition, became city property in 1908 as a result of a bequest. For a number of years it was utilized by the parks department. In the mid-60's the city decided to outfit it as a guest house for official visitors and as a conference centre. Fund-raising for the maintenance of this historic house was headed by the wife of the mayor of Boston.

The finished result is outstanding: a tribute not only to the city council, but to the joint effort of a city and its concerned citizens meeting to refurbish a landmark to fill a civic need. This is creative imagination at its finest: the preservation of the best of the past to serve the needs of the present.

Surely such a way could be found for Roslyn. — Adele H. Lewis, 2940 Seaview Rd.

Trees

It's been a while since my husband and I came home over the Humpback. Do you know that short avenue of firs that someone a considerable length of time ago had the foresight to plant near the Goldstream Inn? I long for a tree-lined drive like that.

Why is it that there are people with power saws who have no heart for trees? I watched the butchering of Shelbourne's plane trees at the end of my school days. Their shade was kind to me before people too cheap to widen the road properly and put hydro underground got at them.

Am I to endure this again? I am powerless to stop such money-making animals. But every cut to graceful, scented wood is a cut to me. — Mrs. Norma J. Goudie, P.O. Box 476, Sooke.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 4, 1914

"Victoria is supposed to be a city of mossbacks," stated Mayor Stewart last night at the banquet of the Pacific Coast Fire Chiefs association in the Empress hotel. "I'll show you some of the moss that has grown on our backs. In proportion to population Victoria has a greater proportion of paved streets and concrete sidewalks than any other city in America. Our fire department is rated from the insurance standpoint at 100 per cent which cannot be improved on. This hotel in which we are now seated is one of the most magnificent in the West. Only a few years ago the site on which it stands was tide flats."

Our 'Peace-Keepers' Gone But the War Goes On

By JAMES EAYRS

Twenty years ago this month, the three International Commissions of Supervision and Control for Indochina held their first meeting — the first of hundreds yet to come.

At one of them — so the minutes tell us — proceedings were opened with "two minutes of silence as an expression of its sincere hope for peace"...

No reason to doubt the sincerity of its Canadian, Indian, or even Polish member's hope on this occasion that the protracted suffering of the peoples of Indochina, with so little respite from war since the Japanese had occupied their homelands in July 1841, would soon be ended. But ended on whose terms?

Never has the power of prayer proven more ineffectual. Two days of silence might have done it — or two years. One thing is certain. Two minutes were not enough.

The war rages to this day. A final climacteric looms as Hanoi readies itself to seize on the battlefield what Ho Chi-minh with reason felt it had been cheated of by politics — control of South Vietnam and so of Indochina.

What were Canadians, of all people, doing in places like that — Hanoi, Vientiane, Phnom Penh? We were far from being sure.

Two missions seemed to have defined themselves. One was to protect the interests of the West — that "free world" as it was not yet ludicrous to call it — in the struggle against Asian communism.

Call Spade a Spade

The other was to supervise the Geneva settlements — calling a spade a spade, a violator a violator, without fear or favor.

These missions quickly became incompatible. Canadians could not do one and do the other.

But they were told to try to do them both. "Though the Americans are not as intimately connected with Indochina as are the French, you will wish to bear in mind in your contacts with them not merely our very close and friendly relations with the United States but also the demands of judicial objectivity and discretion".

Such were the instructions furnished by the Canadian government to our three Commissioners in Indochina. A free but not inaccurate translation might be rendered as "Fish and cut bait". Or as "Impartiality if necessary but not necessarily impartiality".

As referees of the Geneva settlement, the International Commissions in Indochina were required to make judgment calls not just on infractions by North and South Vietnamese, or even by Chinese and French. They were required to blow the whistle on Americans as well.

Here was a development unforeseen by Canada. It had not been with the blessing of Washington that Canadians had gone to Indochina. Our ambassador failed to obtain the United States' approval of our going there. Ike and Dulles disliked the outcome at Geneva, thought the settlement a sell-out. Wanting no part of it, they were cool to Canada's part in it.

Favorite Game

Nothing, accordingly, in the Canadian commissioners' letters of instruction prepared them for the steadily mounting intrusion of U.S. power and influence in the region. "The American embassy staff increases daily," our man in Phnom Penh reported in April 1955. "Not long ago our favorite indoor game was counting the number of Poles in the hotel dining room. Now we count the Americans."

So long as they stayed in the dining room, the balance of power remained unaffected. But the Americans had not come to Indochina just to enjoy the cruisine — tolerable at Phnom Penh's Hotel Le Royal, execrable at Hanoi's Hotel Coq d'Or. (The late Blair Fraser called the Coq d'Or the Cockroach.) As soon as they left the dining room the balance began to tilt.

U.S. policy at the outset had been to ignore the Geneva settlement. Less than three months later, U.S. policy was to sabotage the Geneva settlement. The Eisenhower administration decided to take over from the French the training and equipment of the armed forces of South Vietnam.

The order went out on October 22, 1954 — arguably the most fateful date in the history of American foreign policy. The U.S. ambassodor in Vietnam and the head of the U.S. Military Assistance and Advisory Group there were directed to "collaborate in setting in motion a crash program designed to bring about an improvement in the loyalty and effectiveness of the Free Vietnamese forces". That would take, it was estimated, some $200 millions a year. It was felt to be well worth the cost.

Blow the Whistle?

Dumbfounded at these developments, the Canadian commissioner in Vietnam appealed to Ottawa for guidance. Should he blow the whistle on Americans, too? There was not much comfort in Ottawa's reply. The Canadian government, he was told, shared his apprehension.

The U.S. build-up was not confined to Vietnam. In May 1955, the Americans entered into a military aid agreement with Cambodia.

India — Canada's spiritual companion on the Indochina commissions, at least by comparison with Poland — denounced the U.S.-Cambodian agreement as "unwise" and "provocative".

Ottawa concluded that "not in any way" did the Agreement "conflict with the relevant provisions of the Cease-Fire Agreement".

The stage was set for a showdown. Would ICSC Cambodia denounce the U.S.-Cambodian agreement as a violation of the Geneva settlement? Our man in Phnom Penh thought it might well do so. "The Poles are pressing the Indian chairman and he is being prodded by his own government", the Canadian commissioner worriedly reported from the field. "Both Poles and Indians are obviously suspicious of American intentions".

With reason. But our policy-makers saw them in a different light. Intrusive? Yes. Subversive? No. The American gambit in Cambodia was a necessary and constructive move in the world-wide struggle against creeping communism. It should be helped, not blocked.

How then best to help it? The Canadian commissioner was told to go to work to head off a hostile resolution.

After what a member of the Canadian delegation described as "two months of wrangling, fence-sitting and procrastination" and "an inch-by-inch fight," a qualified victory was obtained. The resolution was unsatisfactory, but not that unsatisfactory. Canada and the United States could live with it.

The military adviser to the Canadian commissioner summed it up best. "Although we have not been able to obtain a clear statement which would give MAA a clean bill of health, it seems to me that much has been gained .... What I would call the reality is safe. By that I mean that military aid will be given to Cambodia."

Our foreign minister was pleased by this, and wrote to say he was. So were the Americans. "You may be interested to know," L. B. Pearson stated after tendering his congratulations at the successful completion of the mission, "that the United States Ambassador here has written to say how you did an outstanding job of diplomacy in dealing with the United States-Cambodia MDA Agreement in recent deliberations within the International Supervisory Commission."

Defending U.S. interests within the three international commissions for Indochina was only one of the ways in which Canada could and did give aid and comfort to her American ally.

In addition to "shaping the record" to the advantage of the United States by the efforts of Canadian members of the commissions — supposedly impartial international public servants, practically agents of the Canadian government — Ottawa passed on to Washington items of intelligence gathered by Canadians serving on the Commissions as they went about their international assignment both at headquarters and in the field.

Done on the Quiet

That commission membership would afford Canada the chance to get such information for the United States had been held out by the Canadian government as an inducement to obtain American support for our prospective Indochina mission.

"We would wish to keep the United States informed privately of the course of events," our ambassador told the U.S. State Department in July 1954. "This we felt we could do quite properly without impinging on our responsibilities as members of the Commission."

While the propriety of passing to a foreign power intelligence acquired in the performance of duty on an international commission might pass muster within the policy community at Ottawa, outsiders might be less understanding. The job could be done; but it must be done on the quiet. Clandestinity was to be the order of the day.

It was not without misgiving that the Canadian government gave itself over to such an enterprise. It would be tough to justify politically. "In making this information available to Washington," foreign secretary L. B. Pearson thought it well to remind his ambassador there once more, "you might emphasize again that this and all information we have been passing to them both in Washington and through their embassy in Ottawa is for their background use only and under no circumstances should be disseminated publicly or referred to in public. Should it become generally known," Pearson added, "that we are passing any information to tht United States Government concerning the activities of the International Commissions it would have very serious repercussions for our representatives on the Commission."

That was if anything an understatement. They could be justly accused if caught in the act of betraying their trust and violating their mandate. They could be accused of spying for a foreign power.

Worth the Risk

But Pearson decided it was worth the risk.

Keeping the United States informed "of the course of events" meant passing on to Washington the supposedly confidential records of the three Indochina commissions. It meant relaying reports and analaysis from the Canadian commissioners' dispatches to Ottawa.

And it soon entailed items of military intelligence too. One report from the Canadian military advisor in Cambodia — on bandit, sect and suspected Viet Minh activities there — drew from an official in Ottawa the comment "This is the sort of information which we are in a unique position to give our friends."

A typical month's harvest is that from Laos in February 1956. it includes:

- Sketch and a description of a Pathet Lao land mine;
- Road reconnaissance report;
- Report that a payroll had been found disclosing that Pathet Lao troops were being paid in North Vietnamese currency;
- Report on the enlargement of an airfield;
- Report on the disposition and armament of small craft of the Laotian Navy.

There was a limit, however, to the lengths to which our generosity would go. Suggestions from the Canadian embassy in Washington that our personnel on the Indochina commissions returning home from tours of duty there could usefully be interviewed by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency were turned down by Ottawa. It may be guessed that the refusal stemmed less from the Canadian government's desire to keep the information to itself than from its feeling that having Canadian diplomats and soldiers report in such a fashion to an intellegence agency of a foreign power — even so friendly a foreign power as the United States — was somehow unbefitting Canada's status as a sovereign nation.

No such inhibitions kept our own Indochina hands from sharing their experiences with allied diplomats. The CIA was one thing, a friendly foreign office something else.

Accordingly, our commissioner for Vietnam spent a day in April 1955 at Whitehall where he told Sir Harold Gaccia and other British diplomats of, having seen no sign of starvation in the North, of his high opinion of General Giap's military prowess ("smart and ruthless"), of having observed President Ho Chi-minh to be "still physically active and astute." Our commissioner for Laos likewise spent two or three days chatting with members of the U.S. State Department in November 1956.

'Betraying Trust'

The secret could not be kept forever — nor was it. On May 9, 1967, Canadians read in their newspapers the charge that their diplomats and soldiers in Vietnam were "betraying their trust by acting as informants for U.S. intelligence agencies."

Ottawa, of course, denied it. No allegation could have caused more of a flap at the Department of External Affairs. Over the image of Canada that all our governments before and since have sought to project at home and abroad — the image of the disinterested and impartial mediator, informed by an internationalist spirit in no way compromised by our close relations with the United States — it poured a bucket of tar. Then it added feathers.

But the charge was only too well founded.

Revolt of the Fishermen

By RICHARD GWYN

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — "The issue is professionalism and the rights and the status that go with it. Fishermen are going to be taken seriously and they are going to be treated like professionals."

For two months nearly half of Newfoundland's fishing industry has been idled by strike. That comment by Richard Cashin, president of the province's Food, Fish and Allied Workers' Union, described the core of the issue: The immediate problem, predictably, is wages, or more accurately the price that fishermen will be paid for their fish; in the long term, at stake is a principle that will affect Canada's entire east coast fishery.

Fishermen never have been taken seriously, nor have they been professionals. They have been instead marginal workers, trapped at the bottom of a ladder that reaches ultimately to the giant food chains that retail their products at prices over which they have no say.

Although, traditionally, almost the weakest of all groups of workers, the Newfoundland fishermen now are demanding the same rights as the strongest — the right, that is, not to suffer a loss in income whenever market conditions temporarily decline, any more than, say, automobile workers have their wages cut when the automobile market softens or when manufacturers reduce the price of their cars to clear unsold stock.

Part of the story behind the strike tells itself in statistics. A year ago the rope fishermen use for their nets cost 50 cents a pound; today it costs $1.60. Gasoline then cost 31 cents a gallon; today it is 39 cents. During the same 12 months the price offered to fishermen for species such as perch and flounder has dropped by up to 3 cents a pound.

The new element in this equation is the inflated cost of gear. Fish prices always have risen and fallen with the regularity of the tides. Low prices drive fishermen to other trades, the catch dwindles and its value accordingly rises. Prices then soar until the spiral breaks. High prices attract new fishermen — Japanese and Koreans, for example with low-quality Alaska pollock — and at the same time consumers switch to competative white meats, pork and chicken.

Fish prices turned downward last January. Consumption in the U.S. prime market has dropped and Canadian warehouses bulge with 18 million pounds of fish fillets and blocks compared to 11 million pounds last year — the inventory would be higher except that poor ice conditions have reduced the east coast catch by almost one-third.

Logic demands a price cut. This, precisely is what the Newfoundlanders have refused to accept. On July 1 the fishermen of the northern outport of Port-aux-Choix refused to sell at the company's price and one by one tied up their 70 longliners at the wharf. The strike since has spread to more than 700 trawlermen and has idled 3,000 onshore plant workers for lack of any fish to process.

The explanation for the other half of the story behind the strike lies in attitudes and in changed expectations. For the first time in Newfoundland's history its fish plant workers, inshore fishermen in their small boats and the deep sea trawlermen all have joined forces on the picket lines. By holding together they have forced the provincial government to intervene to try to negotiate a settlement to avoid what Premier Frank Moores has called "a social upheaval."

That upheaval in fact already has taken place. When the union began four years ago, the weekly wages of fish plant workers averaged $50-$76; today they average $150-$175. The success of the union is such that it likely soon will expand to Pince Edward Island.

The fishermen's refusal to accept lower prices for their produce is one more step in the same direction. Unlike the plant workers, the fishermen are self-employed. They thus have no security of income. This is the historical law they are determined to break.

There are no villains in the affair. The fish processing companies, facing a drop in retail demand and in retail prices, are hard-pressed: Halifax-based National Sea, for example, has sustained a $500,000 operating loss this year compared to a profit of $1.3 million for the same period in 1973.

The answer lies in government guaranteed prices to the fishermen, patterned after those Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has promised for the farmers. What Canada's fishermen, east and west, need in short is a champion like Whelan. What they have instead is Romeo Leblanc, the new fisheries minister, competent, pleasant and unknown.

The People We Don't Need

RUSSELL BAKER

I read in the papers recently that there are 500 million marginal people on the earth. These are people the world can't use. There is no economic need for them — no jobs, not enough natural resources, not enough arable land, not enough food. Socially and economically, they are useless, if not worse, since they cause political upheaval, high taxes and slums.

It must be very dispiriting being one of the world's marginal people. Knowing that the blue-chip people wish you would just disappear cannot help self-esteem; living in the margin must be cheerless and demeaning.

Even at its best, as in the United States where old people in the margin dine on pet foods and marginal mothers are tyrannized by welfare bureaucrats, the sustenance offered by a robust state is poisoned by the bile of the benefactors. Uselessness and idleness stand high on the American tables of cardinal sin. Helplessness is a condition not likely forgiven, and charity's reward is a tax deduction.

More and more Americans will become marginal very soon now, if the economists are correct. These are the people who will have to move off the employment list as inflation shakes down the economy. Official economists are talking about unemployment going as high as 6 per cent before inflation begins to slow down, and pessimists are talking about 7 per cent.

These are only guesses by people whose guesses have lately been wrong with regularity, but everybody seems to agree that we are going to have to shove more people out into the cold of the margin before we stabilize the price of milk.

And afterward, what? Shall we go on, old style, abusing them as idlers, welfare bums, failures, shameful takers of government handouts, life's losers, people who have let the country down?

These traditional views rest on the notion that work is good and that people who work are, therefore, good too, and ought not to be burdened with the support of people who don't work (bad).

Surely, however, this traditional view fails to recognize economic reality. If more people must go into the margin to halt inflation, then the people who go are doing great service to the state.

The government should point out that these are people who have made great sacrifices to enlist in the war on inflation. They should be honored, not reviled. Service in the margin, like service in Vietnam a few years ago, may be an honor largely confined to the luckless, but we can at least refrain from treating it with scorn.

We might go further toward a truly sensible policy. At present the ranks of marginal people are filled by a sort of draft policy: Nobody asks you if you want to become marginal, you are simply plucked out of your life's work one day and pressed into the margin.

Would it not be sound to follow the military's example by abolishing the draft and switching to a volunteer margin? Vigorous recruitment programs might persuade workers in secure jobs to leave them for service against inflation in the margin. All those who now complain about having to work hard to support the idlers in the margin should be easy targets for recruitment, persuaded as they appear to be of the pleasures of idleness and the burdensome nature of work.

I am not naive about this. I realize that there is a serious obstacle to recruitment. This is the national faith in what President Nixon used to call "the work ethic," a conviction that working is ethical and not working isn't.

The government can change this with its propaganda machinery. What, after all, is so ethical about work when the country is crying out for unemployment to save its economy from being inflated into an uneconomy?

If the country needs fewer workers, not more, it has every reason to preach the nobility of the non-work ethic. Uncle Sam needs idlers. That should be its slogan.

Once we lured into the margin all the additional people necessary to save the dollar, what would we do with them? Give them a distinctive lapel button they could be proud of, I suppose, and some sort of unemployment compensation until the crisis passed, and then, when enough time had gone by, go back to wishing they would disappear, like all old heroes.

Wood Slump Underplayed

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Premier Barrett's declaration that the economy is in great shape except for the lumber industry is like saying the boat is moving along fine — except it's on fire.

The forest industry is fundamental to B.C., almost as important statistically as oil is to Alberta.

Fully 51 per cent of all manufacturing in B.C. is in forest products. The bulk of this total is centred on the lumber industry which lives or dies according to conditions in its main market, the United States.

Conditions in the U.S. are wretched. From a high of 2.4 million housing starts in 1972, the construction pace has slumped to 2 million in 1973 and an estimated 1.3 million in 1974.

Lumber is piling up on U.S. docks and B.C. companies have been asked to reduce shipments.

The effects on the B.C. economy are widespread, including layoffs across the province.

The slump is thought to be only temporary but it is severe by any standard and no area will be more strongly affected than B.C.

B.C. forest companies are optimistic the pace of construction will pick up in the U.S. by mid-1975 but between now and then unemployment will become as big a problem as inflation.

Premier Barrett made his all-is-well-except-lumber remark this week in releasing a mid-year economic report.

His statement was accurate, although it seemed to underplay the devastating effects of the lumber slump. Except for forest industry — and the decline in copper prices — the B.C. economy continues to be remarkably strong.

Government spending on hydro-electric projects and housing are the main features of the activity. Heavy government spending in other departments also is acting as a prop to the economy.

The private sector is not in decline but its rate of growth is far below the growth rate of government expansion.

Since 1970, spending in the primary industries and construction, almost all in the private sector, increased to $714 million from $525 million.

In the same period, however, government spending on utilities and dams almost doubled. Utility spending, almost all by the provincial government, has risen to $1.165 billion from $697 million.

Expenditures on housing, a large portion of which is government activity, has risen to $1.120 billion from $561 million.

Institutional spending and government services rose to $773 million from $422 million in 1970.

While the heavy government spending will get B.C. through the worst of the lumber slump the spending can not continue indefinitely.

The government relies heavily upon taxation and stumpage fees from the forest industry to finance its spending in other areas.

A prolonged construction slump would drain the government's coffers and force a cutback or a move into deficit spending, something Barrett is hoping to avoid.

HOUSING LOANS UP 52%

mortgage loans outstanding by chartered banks in British Columbia rose by 52 per cent to $1.022 billion in the 12 months to March 31, 1974. This was substantially greater than the national increase of 33 per cent, according to the Canadian Bankers' Association which has collated a number of banking industry statistics prepared by the Bank of Canada.

G. B. Langley, chairman of the B.C. committee of the association, evident from increases in personal and farm loans and loans to independent and medium-sized businesses.

In the 12-month period there was a 30-per-cent increase $1.434 billion in consumer loans, compared with a rise of 25 per cent nationally. The 30 per cent gain to $104 million to B.C. farmers exceeded the cross-Canada figure of 24 per cent.

Business loans of up to $100,000 rose by 20 per cent to $504 million, against an increase of 11.9 per cent nationally.

Westinghouse Seeks Voluntary Cost Hike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. asked its corporate customers Tuesday to voluntarily pay more for goods already on order.

The company said soaring costs of everything from steel to plastic have eaten up profits on millions of dollars of heavy electrical products ordered months ago but still not shipped to customers.

If customers refuse to provide the "price relief" Westinghouse is seeking, the company will be committed to deliver the products at prearranged contract prices, a company spokesman said.

Escalator clauses are built into the contracts, but the company said it was unable to foresee cost increases of 33 to 56 per cent for steel, iron, copper, brass, aluminum, pulp, paper, plastic and other materials.

Gordon Hurlbert, executive vice-president of the Power Systems division, and Westinghouse chairman Donald Burnham stressed that the extraordinary financial plea does not mean the company's life is at stake.

The company showed a profit of $94.2 million, or $1.06 a share on sales totalling $2.67 billion in the first half of 1973. But while sales increased to more than $3 billion for the first six months of this year, earnings declined to $62.3 million or about 70 cents a share.

A company spokesman said the goods involved in the request account for about three per cent of Westinghouse's total sales. Increases being sought average six to eight per cent, he said.

B.C. Tel Approves $17M Share Issue

VANCOUVER (CP) — The issuing of $17 million in preferred shares in B.C. Telephone Co. Ltd, was approved here Tuesday by a general meeting of common shareholders.

The issue is still subject to approval by the telecommunications committee of the Canadian Transport Commission which decides the matter Sept. 19.

Proceeds of the issue would be used to pay off short-term bank loans.

The preferred issue would have a dividend rate of 8.75 per cent a year and a sinking fund payment will be applied to redemption of 10 per cent of the issue a year starting Oct., 1975.

At the Sept. 19 hearing, the company will also seek approval of an issue of common shares, the amount as yet undetermined.

Manitoba Fourth Province To Top One Million People

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's population was estimated at 22,446,000 at June 1 and the latest annual estimate from Statistics Canada puts Manitoba in the list of provinces with more than one million.

B.C. had the greatest percentage growth during the year — 3.5 per cent — among the provinces while Ontario had the great numerical growth.

For the sixth consecutive year, Saskatchewan had a drop in population — to 907,000 from a 1968 peak of 960,000. All other provinces have grown in population at least since 1970 when Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick also had drops in totals.

The percentage increase between June, 1973, and this June in Ontario was two per cent, in the Prairie provinces 1.4 per cent, in the Atlantic provinces one per cent and in Quebec nine-tenths of one per ent.

Population estimates for this year and last year for the provinces and territories were: Newfoundland, 542,000 and 541,000; P.E.I., 117,000 and 115,000; Nova Scotia, 813,000 and 805,000; New Brunswick, 662,000 and 652,000; Quebec, 6,134,000 and 6,081,000; Ontario, 8,094,000 and 7,939,000; Manitoba, 1,011,000 and 998,000; Saskatchewan, 907,000 and 908,000; Alberta, 1,714,000 and 1,683,000; B.C., 2,395,000 and 2,315,000; Yukon, 19,000 and 20,000; and Northwest Territories, 38,000 in both years.

TRUDEAU AVOIDS U.K. LIBERALS

LONDON (CP) — A spokesman for U.K. Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe says Prime Minister Trudeau will not attend the Liberal party's annual conference this month because of the growing likelihood of another British general election being announced.

The spokesman said Trudeau has not formally said he will not attend the conference, starting Sept. 10, but added: "we are not pressing him and he will definitely not be coming."

Trudeau had agreed in principle to an invitation from Thorpe earlier this year to address the conference.

But Thorpe's spokesman said it would be unfair to press the Canadian leader to attend in the midst of pre-election fever when his presence might indicate he was taking sides or meddling in domestic affairs.

For 4 days only our $170 vested suit will be $142.98 But that isn't why you'll buy it

The grey flannel suit. If they hadn't already written a play about a man who wore one, they would now.

For this season, flannel's the single most important fabric. More than a fabric—it's a look. Purebred class. In classic shades of plain grey, blue, brown.

As you can see, it's vested. And if you could move closer, you'd see finely stitched lapel and pocket edges.

At their regular prices of $170, this all-wool Leishman suit (and dozens of others in plain shades, neat checks and classic plaids) are sensational values.

Victoria to Pay For Road Repair

The stretch of North Dairy from Cedar Hill to Doncaster which lies in Saanich will be improved at a cost of $28,000 by the city of Victoria.

Saanich council agreed Tuesday to accept the city's offer to improve the stretch as part of the Finlayson Street construction program.

Ald. Bill Campbell said the city's gesture was "a good thing for Saanich," but Ald. Mel Couvelier had reservations.

He felt the improvement would result in much heavier traffic on Cedar Hill and said "the city was passing the buck."

"Because the city decides to run good streets out to Saanich I would hope we can see it to see it through," Ald. Fred Severson said.

Ald. Sandy Noel said the road improvement would help link up two major shopping centres.

Couvelier reminded council the city council was not interested in helping to open up the route as far as Shelbourne.

"City council does not favor the extension on Finlayson Street through North Dairy to Shelbourne," city manager Jim Bramley had written Saanich, "and does not want to see a traffic artery constructed that will disturb the residential character of the Finlayson Street area.

"We have over the last few years discussed a possible 50-50 cost-sharing of the Cedar Hill-Shelbourne section of this project but present city policy does not support the opening up of this route."

Mayor Ed Lum observed that councils changed and so could their policies.

Council agreed to Couvelier's suggestion that a letter be sent to city council recommending the extension of North Dairy roadwork to Shelbourne be done on some future date on a 50-50 cost-sharing basis.

ICBC Claims Up 25%

Claims to the Insurance Corporation of B.C. are up 25 per cent over last year, the manager of the Victoria claims centre estimates.

"It's the carnage on the highways — I don't know what you do about it," Jack Bell said today.

The Labor Day weekend produced lineups and hour-long waits at the centre at 3300 Douglas Tuesday, but today the centre is getting back to normal, Bell said.

Every long weekend produces the same rush, he said, with claims adjusters busy handling the serious accident cases.

Safety Up to Public—Park Supt.

TOFINO — Safety measures along Long Beach are adequate and it is largely up to the public to look after itself while using the beach, Pacific Rim Park superintendent Jack Holroyd said after the weekend drowning of two people.

Holroyd denied accusations that inadequate rescue services and warning signs were responsible for the death Saturday of Bessie Horner, 65, of Burk's Falls, Ont., and her granddaughter, Bonnie Horner, 10, of Gibsons, B.C.

The two drowned when their rubber dinghy capsized in heavy seas. A third person in the raft, Gerald Horner, the girl's uncle, swam safely to shore.

Holroyd said he didn't know of any beach seven miles long that had equipment all along it.

He said most park wardens have been instructed in scuba diving and first aid, but the onus must be left partly on members of the public to look after themselves.

Safety measures on the beach were criticized by Kent Fiddy who operates water safety surf school. He said it was an hour after the dinghy capsized before wardens reached the scene and launched their rescue boat.

Holroyd said the drownings occurred off a dangerous section of beach and an hour after lifeguards were off duty.

"People entering the park are told that only a small section at the north end of the beach is patrolled from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"This is a safe area for people who want to swim. Others who go elsewhere are responsible for their own safety," he said

Tofino Coroner Hugo Peterson said he can find no evidence of inadequate safety measures on the beach and will not hold an inquest into the two drownings. He said he will conduct an inquiry.

"I think the safety record of the people who patrol the beach is remarkably good considering the number of vacationers who have used it this summer," he said.

RCMP from Ucluelet who investigated the drownings said rescue equipment used on the beach was up to standard.

New Sites Eyed For Doomed Jail

The attorney-general's department is considering several locations in Greater Victoria for correction facilities to replace Wilkinson Road jail which will be phased out within the next year.

A spokesman for the department said Tuesday a special regional planning team headed by John Ekstedt, the department's executive director of planning and developments, will release recommendations in two weeks.

The announcement follows a statement by Premier Barret that the 60-year-old provincial jail would cease to be within a year.

The spokesman refused to indicate specific locations under consideration, but stressed that very few, "or possibly none" of the jail's staff or inmates will be moved out of the Victoria area.

Officials had previously announced it is not practical for the provincial government to spend money renovating the jail in an attempt to bring it up to standards.

B.C. Buys Land Near Tofino

The B.C. government has bought 145 acres fronting Browning Passage near Tofino, Alberni MLA Robert Skelly said today.

The land, seven miles east of Tofino, was bought for $280,000 through the Green Belt Fund from Jack Dale of Tofino.

The recreation and conservation department said the Dale property is "particularly important" for implementation of plans for the protection and management of an area for migratory birds.

City Sailor Contender

Tony Rose, 18, of 3898 Cadboro Bay, established a strong leading position Tuesday in the first day of elimination racing for the North American Laser Championships in Toronto.

The only Victorian in the 200-man fleet of competitors, Rose earned two fourth positions.

The fleet is divided into four sectors and Rose was leading in his as competition resumed today.

At the end of today's two races, the top 60 competitors will then compete in three more days of racing to decide this year's champion.

Winds were light and fluky Tuesday with a heavy swell and chop adding to the challenge.

Other west coasters competing in the championships at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club are four from Vancouver and one from Seattle.

Crews Rush to Aid Of River Gone Beserk

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Nature's forces, tampered with by man, have left the lower Elk River in a hopeless mess.

Gerrard is directing a project to stabilize seven miles of the lower reaches of the Elk River, which runs through the park and empties in Upper Campbell River.

It went beserk when its banks were logged several years ago, B.C. fish and wildlife officials say.

The river over the years has steadily gouged its banks, formed new channels and its flood plain has lost thousands of tons of soil.

The hundreds of elk and deer which once inhabited the flood plain have nearly all disappeared. So have the mink, otter and many species of birds.

If erosion continues, the bottom of the Elk Valley will become a gravel plain, useless for all time, wildlife officials say.

Debris and tree stumps often act as barriers, forcing the river to seek new channels and compound the erosion problem.

Gerrard and his crew this summer have been removing all river debris lying below maximum water level and piling it on open bar areas for burning this fall.

It is hoped the removal of stumps and debris will permit the river to stabilize into channels and stop undermining the river banks.

This fall, the river will be studied by wildlife biologists to determine the effectiveness of the rehabilitation.

However, if the project is successful, it will take years to rehabilitate fully the wildlife habitat.

The project is being financed by the provincial parks fish and wildlife branches, and B.C. Hydro.

The Elk River Timber Co. is also helping. It is providing a D8 cat and operator for the removal of stumps.

Family Ends Stand At French Embassy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We came out because the American police said they'd help us," said Charlotte Berenguer. "We decided there was no use in staying forever," said her daughter, Jackie.

Joseph Berenguer, his wife, son and three daughters, occupied the French consulate here for seven hours Tuesday. They threatened to set it on fire before emerging in response to the pleas of a long-time friend and sheriff's officers.

The French nationals said they were frustrated over repeated attempts to settle a 12-year-old claim for $20,000 for land confiscated when France granted independence to Algeria in 1962.

"It's a matter of honor," daughter Jeannie, 16, said at one point.

The Berenguers, who run a delicatessen in Santa Barbara, entered the office of Consul-General Jean Francois Roux Tuesday afternoon, ejected its lone occupant, a secretary, and nailed the door shut.

They said they planned to fast for justice and announced: "We have enough gasoline to burn down the building and we're willing to burn with it unless we get justice."

"We've been coming to the consulate for seven years and the government refuses to pay us for the property they took from us," Jeannie said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press.

Finally, Peter Noel Medina, 46, a friend who said he had similar claims, told them they had won the public's attention and could do no more good by extending their stay. They voted to come out.

Three one-gallon glass jugs of clear liquid found in the consulate offices were labeled in red: "Danger-Gasoline." But a fire department spokesman said they contained water.

Sheriff's spokesman Jim Valdez said no charges were brought against the family because "they were on foreign soil as far as we are concerned."

Authorities said those inside were Joseph Berenguer, 52; Charlotte, 40; Jackie, 17; Jeannie, 16; Daniel, 14, and Barbara, 5.

TRUDEAU TRIPS SET

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will go to Europe twice in the coming months, first to France and Belgium in late October and later to other capitals.

Government sources said today the prime minister will visit Paris and Brussels during the fourth week of October for a formal two-day visit to France and a meeting with European Common Market authorities in Brussels.

On a later trip, tentatively planned for sometime during the winter, he will return to Europe to the United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and possibly other Western European countries.

Sources said Trudeau opted to split the European tour into two separate visits to add emphasis to the importance Canada attaches to its relations with France.

Vietnam Warns Oil Team

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnam warned a U.S.-French oil exploration team today to expect "misfortunes" in operating a drilling rig in disputed Gulf of Thailand waters.

The public warning followed a secret diplomatic note to Cambodia threatening to have South Vietnamese warships dismantle or take over the rig unless the drilling equipment is removed by midnight Sept. 12.

"These companies will bear all responsibility for any misfortunes if they continue research and development of offshore resources without the authorization of South Vietnam," the foreign ministry said.

U.S. Army Chief Dies

ABRAMS
Vietnam Commander

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Gen. Creighton Abrams, United States Army chief of staff and former U.S. commander in Vietnam, died today of complications from lung-cancer surgery, the army announced.

The army said his death resulted from "complications that developed during recovery from surgical removal of his cancerous lung," June 6.

Abrams had recovered well enough from the surgery to return to work at the Pentagon, but he re-entered the hospital Aug. 17 complaining of shortness of breath.

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery, the army said. Arrangements were incomplete.

Abrams, once called by the late Gen. George Patton "the best U.S. tank commander in World War II," directed the wind-down of U.S. military involvement in Vietnam.

He was U.S. commander in Vietnam for four years, until the summer of 1972.

Visit May Aid Industry

Premier Dave Barrett hinted Tuesday that his upcoming trip to China may be beneficial to British Columbia's slumping forest industry.

In releasing the government's mid-year economic review, the premier, who doubles as finance minister, said the province's economy was in good shape with the exception of the lumber industry which is "the one black cloud" on the horizon.

Then he added: "I'm hoping that when I'm making the announcement of my trip to China to give an indication there of potential markets.

"But I will leave any further elaboration of that for a while."

Barrett announced some time ago that he would accept an invitation from China's Canadian ambassador and visit China but the dates of the trip have not yet been announced.

N. Ireland Protestants On Alert

BELFAST (UPI) — The Protestant paramilitary Ulster Defense Association has put its forces on alert because of a government plan to reduce the number of British troops in Northern Ireland, a UDA spokesman said today.

"We have put our military units on full alert because we feel that the planned withdrawal of troops from some areas will lead to an increase in provisional IRA (Irish Republican Army) terrorism," said UDA spokesman Tommy Lyttle.

"The military side of the UDA had been stood down since our cease-fire earlier this year, but now they are on full alert," Lyttle said.

The UDA claims to have 20,000 combat trained men ready to take to the streets on command of the UDA leadership.

Northern Ireland secretary Merlyn Rees Monday announced a plan to cut troop strength in the province from 15,000 to 14,000 while increasing the armed police reserve from 2,500 to 6,000.

British Army headquarters in Northern Ireland denied unofficial reports that the army planned to reduce its troop strength by a third within nine months.

"Our policy is that we will maintain the number of troops in Northern Ireland that the situation demands, while retaining the flexibility to respond to any change in the situation," an army headquarters spokesman said.

In another development, relatives of London car bomber Paul Holmes, 29, said his mother was called to Albany Prison on the Isle of Wight to try to talk him into ending a five-day hunger strike.

The relatives said prison officials asked Holmes' 65-year-old widowed mother to intervene after doctors said he could die of a heart ailment unless he ends the strike.

Public Housing Stymied

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC), which has 11,346 families and senior citizens on its waiting lists, said Tuesday it is having trouble getting housing starts approved because of opposition from local municipalities.

"Public housing is a bit like the subway system," Grant Maxwell, OHC information officer, said. "Everyone's in favor of it as long as it isn't in their neighborhood.

"We are in a position where there is a demand for housing, but the local municipality has the authority to reject any of our proposals."

The corporation, which provides housing on a rent-geared-to-income basis, accepts that its impetus must now be directed towards integrating subsidized housing with the private sector.

George Tonking, OHC housing development director said it is possible that no OHC building projects will be started this year.

Describing the problem of getting project starts as "an old chestnut," Tonking said OHC has been grappling with it for two years.

"I don't want to say it is all related to the resistance of the boroughs because they're only reflecting neighborhood attitudes," he said.

OPEC Will Consider Oil Production Cut

VIENNA (UPI) — Economic advisers to the world's major oil-producing nations have decided to recommend a cutback in production to keep petroleum prices high, it was disclosed today.

Officials of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said the group's economic advisory board decided Tuesday to recommend the production drop to compensate for recent oil surpluses.

Ministers of OPEC's member nations, which produce 85 per cent of world oil exports, will consider the board's recommendations when they meet Sept. 12 at the organization's Vienna headquarters, the officials said.

The exporters raised oil prices last year from $3 to $11 a barrel, increasing their revenues by billions of dollars and shaking economies around the world.

Oil industry sources said the hikes caused a drop in gasoline consumption — down five per cent in the United States this summer — and a current oil surplus of 2 million barrels a day.

A joint production cut would slow down the accumulation of surplus wealth, prevent a price slump and conserve supplies for long-term use, OPEC officials said.

"The oil producers have begun to realize that oil underground is more valuable than dollars in the bank," one oil industry official said.

Amnesty Terms Delay Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford may not announce his terms for granting conditional amnesty to Vietnam war deserters and draft evaders until Monday or Tuesday of next week, the chief White House spokesman says.

Ford had said he hoped to announce a decision some time this week, but press secretary Jerald terHorst said Tuesday that the president's current concentration on economic matters may cause a delay.

TerHorst said Ford wants to discuss amnesty again with officials of the defence and justice departments and "has some ideas of his own he wants them to consider."

Last Saturday, Defence Secretary James Schlessinger and Attorney-General William Saxbe recommended that 18 months of public-service employment and a formal reaffirmation of allegiance to the United States be required of the 28,300 potentially eligible deserters and draft resisters.

Ford held meetings Tuesday to discuss amnesty with the national commanders of two veterans' groups, James Wagonseller of the American Legion and Paul Ribner of the Jewish War Veterans.

Wagonseller said the Legion believes each desertion and draft-evasion case should be prosecuted in the federal courts or before military courts martial, adding that "anything else would be gross insult to those who served."

Ribner said he thought Ford's thinking closely resembled his organization's proposal to establish a broadly based national commission to study amnesty.

Escape for Good Reason

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A United States District Court jury has decided an escapee from Sandstone federal prison was not guilty because he fled through fear he would be homosexually raped.

Jeffrey Olsen, 26, escaped from Sandstone Feb. 20. He said he ran away because he was afraid of being homosexually raped by another prisoner who shared the 43-man dormitory where he lived.

The jury of 10 women and two men deliberated three hours Tuesday before deciding that Olson had good reason to flee.

Pasta Blackmarket Item

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Government indecision and hoarding by suppliers or housewives has turned pasta into a blackmarket item in its homeland.

Stores are running out of spaghetti, macaroni and other varieties of the national staple.

"Naples is hungry — a Neapolitan tragedy," says the newspaper Il Mattino.

With inflation soaring, the Italian government has kept pasta on its list of special items whose prices are controlled. Because producers said they were not making a reasonable profit and were threatened with bankruptcy, the government authorized a 45-per-cent price increase, to 75 cents a pound from 52 cents.

Irate mothers and labor leaders protested, and the government ordered a rollback. But there was much expectation that the lower prices would not hold, and pasta disappeared from the stores and markets. Retailers were accused of hoarding and housewives of stocking up.

"Pasta was the only cheap thing there was," said Maria de Biase, a widow. "Now they want to cut that to pieces, too."

Carmela di Criscita says her husband, a construction worker, earns $5 a day and it all goes to buy pasta and bread for their 13 children.

The 2.5 million Neapolitans eat an average of 22 pounds of pasta a month, compared with 6.6 pounds in the industrial city of Turin. The Neapolitans say the poverty of the city is one reason why they depend so heavily on pasta.

Police agents are checking prices in the few places where pasta is being sold, and checking the storerooms in stores displaying the sign "pasta esqurita"—out of pasta.

In the southern city of Taranto, a shopkeeper was arrested for selling at three times the official price.

Court Allows Two Groups To Aid Abortionist Appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — Two private groups have been given permission to intervene in the Supreme Court of Canada hearing of an appeal by convicted Montreal abortionist Henry Morgentaler, a court spokesman confirmed today.

He said Chief Justice Bora Laskin granted the rare permission Tuesday to the Canadian Civil Liberties Association and the Foundation for Women in Crisis. A third group, the Alliance for Life, an anti-abortion association, is scheduled to seek similar permission next Tuesday and the spokesman said there possibly will be at least two more requests.

Morgentaler, 50, was convicted last April by the Quebec Court of Appeal on a charge of performing an illegal abortion. He has publicly admitted performing 5,000 to 6,000 abortions.

The April ruling reversed a November, 1973, decision by a judge and jury that Morgentaler was not guilty.

Currently free on $25,000 bail pending the outcome of his appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Morgentaler was sentenced to 18 months and three years' probation by the provincial appeal court.

Tank Farm Move Rejected

The provincial government has apparently turned down Victoria's suggestion that the unsightly tank farm on the Songhees industrial reserve be relocated to the west side of Esquimalt Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

Pollen said he has received a letter from a deputy minister—whom he wouldn't identify—indicating that the DND property eyed as an alternative site for the tank installations is too ecologically important to be used for that purpose.

The official stated that the property in question was a treed area required for the expansion of Fort Rodd Hill Park, and also considered important in terms of waterfowl and marine life conservation.

Pollen said the only solution offered by the letter was the suggestion that the best possible site for oil storage tanks was in an area where natural values had long since been destroyed—in other words "leave them where they are and perhaps landscape them a little."

With heavy sarcasm, the mayor added: "This is a really aggressive well-informed, very biased, very senior civil servant who has taken it upon himself to enunciate policy and tell us what we should be discussing."

And that was the only provincial response so far to the city's request for the government to press federal authorities for the use of the DND property, he added.

Two Hurt But Fire Halted On Mt. Finlayson

Rocks and other debris tumbling down precipitous Mount Finlayson put two firefighters in hospital Tuesday but the fire burning over the rugged western slope has been "contained."

The hottest part of the two-day blaze was at the base of the mountain beside Goldstream Park this morning but Ranger Marsh Antonelli said bush surrounding it has been smeared with "red mud" fire retardant.

With a little luck the 60-acre fire will be at the mop-up stage by tonight, he said.

★

From the outset Monday afternoon, firefighters have had to contend with boulders and burning snags rolling down on them from the western slope, which in places is too steep to climb.

Also in good condition at Victoria General Hospital is Len Floker, 44, of Colwood, who received a broken hand and cuts to his neck when hit by "tumbling debris."

The fire, which came within about a quarter-mile of a handful of houses on Finlayson Arm Road Tuesday, was stopped at that point.

Antonelli said a fire guard has been bulldozed across the top of Mount Finlayson.

The A-26 water bombers were dropping their 800-gallon loads on a hot spot high on the mountain slope at the northern rim of the fire today.

A 60-man crew is fighting the blaze. It got some help from sporadic showers and cooler temperatures. For the second day there was little wind in the fire area.

It was on Skirt Mountain seven years ago that the two-man crew of a Canso water bomber was killed when the plane clipped the tip of a tree and crashed.

The fire started Monday afternoon beside a hiking trail to the popular summit lookout. Firefighters speculate it was started by a careless smoker.

'Twins' Coming Here

Victoria formalizes its "twin" relationship with the city of Napier New Zealand, next week when it plays host to a party of 18 Napier residents headed by Mayor Peter Tait.

The visit, from Wednesday through Sunday, reciprocates the earlier visit by Mayor Peter Pollen to the "down under" city last February.

The party will be welcomed at a reception in The Empress Wednesday evening, and a civic dinner is planned for Friday.

During Pollen's stay in Napier he was presented with a memento, the intricately carved stern of a Maori war canoe, which now occupies a corner of his office waiting room. In exchange, he presented a totem carved by Indian carver Tony Hunt.

Pollen, Bawlf Roast Second Gov't Freeze

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The provincial government's second development "freeze" in downtown Victoria—this time on the demolition of the B.C. Land Building in the 900-block Government Street—drew an angry response today from city officials.

Mayor Peter Pollen denounced the move as another example of "growing government by decree), in response to really irrational demands by politicians such as Gorst (Esquimalt NDP MLA Jim Gorst) who are making hay out of heritage."

Ald. Sam Bawlf, city council's arch-preservationist of old buildings, condemned the government for taking a "back-door approach" to the problem of heritage preservation.

And city archivist Ainslie Helmcken said if the B.C. Land Building was to be considered and designated a heritage structure, "everything else on Government Street would have to be declared historic."

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall issued the stop-work order Tuesday afternoon, under the terms of the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act.

Deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace explained today that the order applies only to the B.C. Land Building itself, and not to the remainder of the 1.5-acre property which has been assembled for the multi-million-dollar Nordal Mall development.

But even before the order was posted, preliminary demolition work which began Tuesday morning had been halted on instructions of city engineer Jim Garnett.

'Contrary to Safe Practice'

This was done, Garnett explained today, because a demolition permit had not been issued, and in any case workmen engaged in the task Tuesday morning were dismantling and removing fixtures "in a manner contrary to good, safe practice."

Plans for the Nordal project, which is to include condominium suites, offices and a shopping mall linking Government and Wharf, are now being redrawn after the city's Advisory Design Panel expressed dislike of the earlier concept.

Initial land assembly was undertaken by the Nordal family of Victoria, the original development submission was from Vancouver developers Rosborough, Southam and Kornberg and the Calgary-based development firm now involved is Cascade Developments Ltd.

The Calgary firm's principals could not be reached for comment today.

Gorst told the Times the object of halting demolition was to enable a survey of the building's historical importance to the community. He said the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act provides for the compensation of an owner who feels his property value has been diminished — as the legislation states "in an amount to be determined by the Lieutenant Governor in Council."

Bawlf said the city of Victoria more than any other municipality in B.C. has shown a keen interest in preserving its heritage structures, but it is denied "the proper tools for the job" by a government which ignores repeated requests to strengthen and improve existing heritage legislation.

"We have a plethora of legislation on this subject and none of it adequate," he added.

Bawlf said the property owners' agreement to sell is jeopardized by the freeze, and there appears to be no recourse but to await "the whim of the minister."

COLA Clause Catching On

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

COLA has arrived.

Not in a big way. But the inroad has been made.

COLA is the abbreviation for Cost of Living Allowance — clauses in collective agreements designed to cushion the impact of spiralling costs.

As recently as 1971, the research and planning branch of the B.C. labor department had records of only four contracts covering 600 workers with COLAs.

Two years later, there were only six COLAs covering 1,350 workers.

But in the first half of 1974, it is estimated that at least 30 contracts covering more than 100,000 employees contain COLA clauses.

The most popular COLA formula says that for each specified point increase in the national Consumer Price Index, there will be a cent, or number of cents, per hour increase in wages.

Other features of COLA clauses include a trigger — requiring a minimum price increase before the formula is activated; a cap — setting the maximum wages can rise; and a computation period, usually quarterly, to determine when payments will be made.

COLA clauses are still relatively uncommon, not only in B.C., but also on a national basis where one report estimates 20 per cent of major contracts have this feature.

The labor department's research branch, after comparing the advantages and disadvantages of using either the Vancouver or national price index for COLA clauses, notes that neither are exact indicators of price fluctuations.

"But they, unfortunately, get injected into precise formulations. Whether this is to the advantage or disadvantage of employees or employers, there will be discrepancies between the ideal and the reality," the branch says in a report on COLAs.

The report notes that "often employers argue against COLAs entirely" saying that negotiated increases in the basic wage are for anticipated cost-of-living changes.

"However, as with most economic indicators such as the CPI, one is required to predict the future by extending past trends. When this does not prove to be a reasonably clairvoyant method, resultant rancor in worker-employer relations can be expected."

Saanich Staff Exempted

No Saanich municipal employee will have to reveal to council his financial interests and property holdings.

Most aldermen said Tuesday they wouldn't want to see the information even if it was volunteered.

All except Ald. Mel Couvelier voted not to require municipal employees to list their holdings under provisions of the new Public Officials and Employees Disclosures Act.

Couvelier said the provisions of the act were "designed to protect the public welfare" and councils were the "sole custodians of the public welfare.

"I feel most strongly the responsibility is ours and ours alone. If we don't face up to it we would be negligent. Distasteful as it may be I see it as my public duty. We must protect the public's interest and put ourselves in the position of doing that."

Ald. Fred Severson said he had no objection to filing information, as required of elected officials, by Sept. 15, but didn't think municipal employees should do the same.

"I have nothing to declare," he said. "I'm prepared to lay it on the table. It's a funny thing, many political people didn't like it, yet we are saying some of our staff should do it. Strange situation.

"I think the question of land holdings is very important. I think it's up to their conscience. It's up to an individual to bring it to the council if he thinks he should."

"I'm of the opinion we shouldn't force our staff to any disclosure," he said. "I'll not support employees having to disclose."

Under the act, elected officials must register their land holdings within the district where they live and the names of all companies or corporations in which they own one or more shares.

This information is open to the public but similar information filed by employees is available only to council members.

Extension Asked On Bow Season

Saanich council wants to extend the bow and arrow hunting season for deer to March 1.

Mayor Ed Lum told council Tuesday the season opened Aug. 24 and, instead of keeping it to the usual three months the provincial fish and wildlife branch will seek provincial cabinet approval for an extension.

Farmers and nurserymen have complained of crop losses to deer which number about 2,000.

Ald. Sandy Noel said he hoped this would not let loose "a bunch of little Robin Hoods," adding:

"I know a well-placed arrow can be lethal. I've seen a lot of deer killed in my life but a misplaced shot could injure a deer that could run many days and die a lingering death."

Ald. Mel Couvelier suggested an arrow with a tranquilizer might be a better solution.

Lum said indiscriminate shooting by bow and arrow would not be allowed. Archers will have to have a provincial licence as well as permission from property owners to shoot on their land.

Student in PJs Tops UVic Line

A first-year University of Victoria student today was successful in beating the annual cheek-to-jowl registration line-ups — and he did it with pyjamas.

UVic officials report that one male student maintained the much-coveted first of the line registration position by spending the night in a pup tent.

The tent appeared late Tuesday night and its occupant emerged early this morning in pyjamas while hundreds of not-so-anxious first-year applicants were lining up behind.

Registration officers cleared away hundreds of applicants Tuesday in the education and professional year faculties and today first and second year students are following time-consuming procedure in preparation for start of the academic year Monday.

Music and fifth year students to register Thursday and those entering third and four years on Friday.

Many out-of-town students are also using this week to obtain accommodation for the academic year and housing officer Shirley Baker said the campus housing office is managing to keep ahead of the demand.

"I don't sense the kind of urgency other universities (in the East) are experiencing," she said, adding however that room and board rates for students this year have increased from last year's $110 a month average to $130."

The Story: Landers . . . And He May Be Back!

The Canadian men's softball championship tournament is over. Ontario has retained the title, Victoria Bate has proved a worthy runner-up and if it hadn't been for one man, the result could very easily have gone the other way; and probably would have.

Oshawa's lefthander, Pete Landers, was clearly the outstanding figure in the entire championship and the dominating force particularly where Bate was concerned. He allowed them only one run in 20 innings and for that feat alone deserved to win and be named most-valuable.

Naturally, there was some criticism emanating from the final game. What's a final without a bevy of second guessers? Specifically, it has been charged that Bate coach Joe Patterson shouldn't have sent centrefielder Ken Bate home from third in the second inning on an overthrow, when Bate was thrown out at the plate.

So it's easy in hindsight to make the proper call. But consider this:

How many times would the Ontario cover-up man, in this case Landers, be in perfect position, to get a perfect bounce off the wall, and make that perfect throw to the plate? The key word is "perfect". Not many it is suggested and after all isn't Ken Bate the best base-runner on the club and wasn't he in full flight? And who's to say he eventually would have scored if he had been held up? No, I'll go with Patterson because the percentage was in his favor and if everything had worked, Bate just might have broken the ball game wide open right then, and gotten rid of Landers. It was the only inning anybody got two hits off him.

You Go to Your No. 1

Then when pitcher Stan Kern was lifted in the seventh, was that a good move? I agree that Kern, on this day, was the heart of the Bate club in a sometimes bitter struggle. But what some people don't realize is that Kern was pitching with a swollen and painful index finger, which has troubled him all season, and he may have been tiring.

And coach Patterson didn't reach for just anybody. He went for his No. 1, Dave Ruthowsky. And why not? Hadn't Ruthowsky done everything asked in every other game he had worked? And if you can't go to your No. 1, when there's no tomorrow, then what do you do?

Kern's finger split open in the third inning and was bleeding from then on. Meanwhile, Bate outfielder Harvey Stevenson was also suffering. He had an injured Achilles tendon, which had to be frozen each of the last three days of the championship.

Of course, what people are prone to forget too, is that the same coach Patterson obviously knew his players better than most, and did much to get them to where they were — in the Canadian final.

And it's nice to know Bate will be back. Sponsor Herb Bate indicated that even before the final and now again after the tournament. And there seems to be little reason he would change his mind although the disappointment is bound to linger for a few weeks yet. Two losses, both in extra innings, isn't bad; and the key always to the difference between winning and losing is how the teams take it, isn't it?

Surprise of the tournament to many was the play of Bate's Reg Underwood, but not to Bate players. Inexperience was his only failing. He got fooled on few change-ups and he dropped a relatively easy fly ball in one game when he took his eyes off the ball. He responded however, with a towering home run the next at bat; and in the final game, he was at least hitting Landers with authority, if the balls went foul, one long blast clearing the left field wall, foul by only a few feet.

Landers said afterwards Underwood was one of the best up-and-coming players he had seen in the tournament and in his opinion one of Bate's most-dangerous hitters.

Which was a nice credit from obviously Canada's No. 1 pitcher, and Bate manager John Oster easily agreed that it was Landers who had spoiled the Bate party. "He certainly has improved," he said, "over the Landers who played on the Island, he used to be just a thrower, now he's a pitcher."

Pitching for Pay 'n Pak

And what John may or may not know, or even care about, is that Bates may be seeing more of Landers even before next year's national finals. Two statements, two reasons.

An interested spectator at the Canadian finals was none other than Bob Klug of the Seattle Pay 'n Pak, Bate's rivals in the Northwest Fastball League and league champs. And Klug wants Landers.

"Sure, I'm going to talk to him," Klug said. "Why not? He's won everything there is to win in Canada. He was the best here and I think he could help us. Maybe he'd like to come."

And secondly, another shocker. Oster won't be around next season if his present plans materialize. He told sponsor Herb Bate Tuesday he was resigning. "I made up my mind a few feeks ago," he said. "The job has been very demanding and I'd like to do some other things."

Meanwhile, an obvious oversight should be corrected. For Oster, who did so much to get the national final here and on committee to assure the tournament's success, somehow didn't get a silver medal Saturday along with his teammates.

"It was the most disappointing moment of my life," he confided.

I guess so.

When Howes Show Up Others Left Alone

The reason was a 46-year-old man with greying hair and two talented young sons. Gordie Howe arrived at camp —and he didn't even scrimmage.

Howe and the boys, members of Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association, watched the afternoon scrimmage from a press box. Howe, only six pounds over his playing weight although he hasn't been on skates all summer, stepped on the ice in time to engage in wind sprints and stops and starts—exercises calculated to make 46-year-olds wish they had stayed in retirement.

Gordie asked coach Billy Harris if he could scrimmage, but accepted the decision that he might pull a groin muscle in preparation for the eight-game series with Russia that begins Sept. 17 in Quebec City.

Harris said no.

A comparative youngster, Johnny McKenzie, 36, was outstanding in the scrimmage with three goals. He also levelled Pat Price with a vicious check on his first shift and helped Andre Lacroix set up Bobby Hull for two goals.

As training camp opened, McKenzie was overlooked despite an impressive National Hockey League record with Boston Bruins and two productive but injury-plagued years in the World Hockey Association.

"I'm in shape," he said. "I've got things to prove.

In the dressing room, he was reminded that a big play in Team Canada 72's victory over the Russians was a slash by Bobby Clarke that ended in an ankle injury to brilliant centre Valery Kharmalov.

"I don't play like that any more," said the rugged McKenzie.

"But, just in case, what's his number?"

McKenzie and Hull both praised Lacroix for his play. The nimble centre, who lacks straight-ahead speed, played briefly with Hull when they were team-mates at Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Harris had Hull teamed with Jim Harrison in the tentative lineups he issued before training camp started, but he conceded that he'll change the program if required.

If official scoring had been announced Lacroix would have had at least four assists. He also set up McKenzie for a pair of outstanding opportunities thwarted by goaltender Don McLeod.

Lars-Eric Sjoberg, the Swedish international star working with Team Canada although he will not play against Russia, and Rejean Houle added the other goals as the Yellows beat the Blues 7-3.

Scorers for the Blues, who led 2-0 within the first 10 minutes, were Bruce MacGregor, Tom Webster and Ralph Backstrom.

THOMAS RETURNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Duane Thomas returned as a player and presumably starting fullback for Washington Redskins Tuesday as the result of George Allen's "toughest decision ever as a coach."

Allen's reinstatement of the gifted but temperamental runner came exactly a week after Thomas was dismissed because of an altercation with an assistant coach at the Redskins' football training camp in Carlisle, Pa.

The rarely contrite Thomas had met twice with Allen since that incident to apologize and plead for another chance.

But Allen, despite praising Thomas for admitting he was wrong, had considered the answer for five days. He acknowledged over the weekend he was leaning in Thomas's favor, but noted: "Either way, it'll be unpopular with a lot of people."

It was understood that Allen had not consulted the players beforehand. Neither did he discuss the issue with other coaches except for backfield coach Charlie Waller, whom Thomas had threatened and shoved.

Mike Cullin Is Fifth In Heat

LUCERNE, Switzerland (CP) — Brian Thorne of the St. Catharines Rowing Club moved into the semi-finals of the lightweight single sculls at the world rowing championships today, placing second in his heat behind Federico Scheffler of Mexico.

Mike Cullin of Victoria was fifth in his heat for the single sculls, timed in 7:57.46. Heat-winner Jim Dietz of the United States had a time of 7:26.66; .50 seconds slower than Ireland's Sean Drea in a later heat.

Cullin will get another chance in the repechages with only the heat winners in today's races going into the semi-finals.

Thorne's time of eight minutes 30.38 seconds was about nine seconds behind Scheffler but provided a comfortable margin over the Norwegian and Turkish entries on the picturesque, 2,000-metre Rotsee course on the outskirts of Lucerne.

Fastest time in the heats was turned in by Bill Belden of the United States with a time of 8:09.07.

Aeros End Salary War

HOUSTON (AP) — Don McLeod, last year's leading goalie in the World Hockey Association, will not be playing for the champion Houston Aeros this season, president Jim Smith said today.

Smith said that McLeod, who had the best goals-against-average last year in the WHA, will not be back with the Aeros because of a salary dispute.

The Aeros also have another goalie, Ron Grahame, former junior player with the Victoria Cougars who signed a multi-year contract out of Denver University. Smith said the Aeros plan to sign a third goalie.

Drag Meet Won By Oklahoman

Graham, 32, of Oklahoma City, Okla., defeated R. Gaines Markley of Federal Way, Wash., in the finals with a run of 6.17 seconds over the quarter-mile track at a top speed of 232.35 miles an hour.

Markley, 32, was clocked at 6.49 seconds and 207.85 m.p.h.

Prudhomme won the $15,000 first prize with an elapsed time of 6.33 seconds at a speed of 223.32 m.p.h.

Bob Glidden, defending pro stock champion from Greenwood, Ind., was a repeat winner, at 9.01 seconds and 151.26 m.p.h. He beat Don Nicholson of Orange, Calif.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Argo Axe Falls On John Rauch

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts today fired head coach John Rauch and named Joe Moss as his interim successor.

General manager John Barrow told a news conference he had told Rauch of his decision to terminate the coach's contract early this morning.

Barrow said the decision took overnight and "a good deal of thinking" on the part of himself, owner Bill Hodgson and chairman Lew Hayman.

"However, in the final analysis, it was my decision," said Barrow.

Explaining why he had made a questionable call had become almost a habit this season for Roach.

For the third time this season, Argos lost a Canadian Football League game, mainly because of a questionable call by Rauch, dropping a 12-11 decision to Montreal Alouettes before a record crowd of 34,697 Tuesday night.

In one earlier game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Rauch called a third-down running play which failed and he ended up admitting it was the turning point in an Argo loss. A later loss to Winnipeg came when Rauch ordered a punt on the last play of the game, which the Blue Bombers turned into a winning touchdown.

Tuesday night, Rauch sent rookie running back Ernie Carnegie into the game late in the third quarter with a "gadget play" which failed when Carnegie's high, floating pass into the end zone was intercepted by Dickie Harris.

Promising Drive Snuffed Out

The Argos were leading 11-9 at the time and the interception snuffed out a promising drive.

After the game, Rauch defended the play.

"One gadget play—you work on it and you work on it in practice and it works perfectly every time," said Rauch.

"The instructions are not to throw if it will get you in trouble. But, in game conditions, a rookie feels the pressure."

Coach Marv Levy of the Als also defended Rauch's call.

"I think it was a good call and I'm not trying to be a wise guy," said Levy.

"Of course it wasn't executed well, but that doesn't detract from the call."

Montreal's win provided it with a four-point lead in the Eastern Conference. The Als now have a 5-2 record while the other three clubs—Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton—are tied with 3-4 records.

All of Montreal's offence came from the boot of Don Sweet who provided four field goals—the last one providing the winning margin at 9:33.

Toronto's only touchdown came on a 45-yard interception return by cornerback Dave Raimey. Kicker Zenon Andrusyshyn provided the convert, a field goal and a single.

The character of the game —a defensive battle along the lines of many that have bored fans this season—prompted Levy to propose a change in CFL rules to promote more offence.

Four Downs? 'Fans Will Go Nuts'

"I know the fans will go nuts when I say this, but what Canadian football needs is four downs," said Levy.

"Four downs and unlimited blocking on punt returns. If Canadian fans want their game livened up, that's what they need."

Rauch, on the other hand, seemed to favor an improved performance from his offensive unit rather than a rule change.

"We make a spark on offence every now and again but just can't put a couple of sparks together to produce touchdowns," said Rauch.

"Our defence is playing great. But it's one thing to keep the other team from scoring and another not to score any yourself."

Sally Polson bashed out a two-run triple Tuesday night to highlight a five-run first inning and help Esquimalt Combos nip Stockers North Americans 8-6 in the opening game of the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League playoff final at Hyacinth Park.

The game was called after six innings because of darkness.

Sport Fisherman Records Offensive Gillnetters

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Bob Rogerson, secretary of the Amalgamated Conservation Society, has the "goods" on eight gillnetters who ran through a group of sports fishing boats Saturday off Beechey Head . . . Bob was fishing in Bill Ona's 17-footer about 75 feet off the head when a string of five gillnetters swept "at a fair speed" between them and the shore . . . Later, at intervals of nearly an hour, three more commercial boats repeated the stunt . . . "We got sloshed around pretty good," said Rogerson, who kept careful notes on the time of each incident and the licence numbers of the craft involved . . . He intends to make a complaint to federal fisheries . . . Although the boat Bob was in was only rocked, a smaller boat could have been swamped . . . Similar complaints were voiced by sports fishermen in the vicinity of Trial Island and off the mouth of Pedder Bay . . . It seems the netters aren't content just to dry up sports fishing on the Labor Day weekend but insist on harassment tactics as well . . . Needless to say, not all the commercial boats are guilty of this practice, but the innocent ones should police the others . . . Better still, existing laws should be enforced.

Art Morton reports the four-man action committee, formed to combat the provincial government decision to allow a mainstem water storage dam on the Chemainus River, has obtained a copy of the minutes of the cabinet committee hearing which produced that particular idiocy . . . The document in question looks almost as loosely-knit as the data on which the decision was made . . . Meanwhile, a public meeting is expected shortly . . . Watch this space for details.

Brian Cooper won the Esquimalt Anglers' Association Cerebral Palsy derby over the long weekend with a 31-pound, one-ounce chinook . . . Jack Parker was second with a 24:08 catch and Den Heinekey came third with a fish weighing 22:08 . . . James Hawkins won the draw for the boat . . . A total of about 600 boats (200 each day for three days) only managed to catch 123 fish after the commercial netters started working Juan de Fuca Strait . . . Of those, only 22 were over five pounds . . . Perhaps a few screams of protest to our newly-elected fisheries minister, Romeo LeBlanc, might be in order . . . It will be interesting to see the direction in which his sympathy lies.

Now used as a base for statistics gathering by the provincial fish and wildlife branch, the B.C. Archery Association's annual bowhunt in the Nimpkish Valley this past week proved a great success . . . A total of 41 bowhunters, including a trio from Williams Lake, took part in the hunt and bagged a total of 18 deer, two bear and eight grouse . . . Don Baxter of Nanaimo won the trophy for the largest buck deer, which measured 35½ inches under the bowhunting scoring system . . . Dave Harper of Mission captured the largest bear (29 inches) and his brother, Don, collected a trophy for the most grouse (five) . . . Doug Wood of Metchosin came back with the smallest deer (5⅛ inches), while his club, the host Metchosin Bowmen, won the club title for the most game . . . Alice Riddle won the fishing competition for women members of the group with a 16¼-inch cutthroat landed in the Davie River . . . The only junior, 13-year-old Bruce Hatter, managed to bag a buck early in the hunt and Mrs. Samantha Eha of Vancouver topped distaff hunters with a four-pointer.

Pacific Trollers' Association, in their monthly newsletter, points out no less than nine adverse consequences will arise from the proposed Kemano II project . . . This dam system, which would supply added power for Alcan, would wipe out the salmon runs of the Buckley and Morrice rivers, seriously affect the Dean River fishery, reduce the main stream flow of the Skeena River, completely shut off the Nechako River, affect the Fraser River system, interfere with the water supply of Telkwa and Smithers, harm tourist trade in the Buckley Valley, provide the people of B.C. with miles of dry, and rock-strewn river beds, raise the level of Ootsa Lake — adding perhaps to the mess of drowned timber . . . Our previous provincial government gave the go-ahead on this scheme and now it is being promoted as a co-operative effort between the provincial and federal governments to help development in northern B.C. . . . considering the loss to the fishing industry alone, I seriously question whether this project will aid anyone but Alcan.

Nichols, Millar Win Cup Event

Lionel Nichols and Danny Millar of Victoria Lawn Bowling Club combined to capture top honors in the annual men's doubles competition for the Yarrows Cup, defeating clubmates Bert Tallack and Chuck Davis 13-6 in Monday's final at the Canadian Pacific greens.

Base-Thief Brock Closer To Topping Maury's Mark

By The Associated Press

To stop Lou Brock from stealing bases, it seems you have to either hope for a lot of rain or keep him off the basepaths.

The first method worked Monday for Montreal Expos when their game against Brock and St. Louis Cardinals was rained out.

The second method worked in the opener of their twi-night doubleheader Tuesday. Brock was retired in each of his four trips to the plate, although the Cards posted a 5-1 victory.

But the Expos ran out of methods in the second game, won by St. Louis 8-4, and Brock swiped his 99th base of the season.

Brock now is just five short of Maury Wills' record of 104 stolen bases set in 1962.

"I'm not worried, I've got plenty of time," Brock said later.

"It's you guys who are worried," he told reporters gathered around him in the clubhouse.

"You don't know when I'm going to be doing what I'm going to do."

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Philadelphia Phillies 8-2, Cincinnati Reds defeated Houston Astros 7-5, San Francisco Giants outscored Los Angeles Dodgers 9-5, Atlanta Braves topped San Diego Padres 7-2 and New York

LOU BROCK
. . . not worried

In the American League Tuesday, Chicago White Sox beat Kansas City Royals 2-1; Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers split a doubleheader with the Tribe winning the first game 5-1 and losing the second 5-4 in 11 innings; Texas Rangers downed Minnesota Twins 6-3 and Oakland Athletics blanked California Angels 7-0.

Brock singled to lead off the third inning of the second game against Steve Rogers. With a 1-1 count on Ted Sizemore, he broke for second and easily beat the throw from catcher Barry Foote.

"The only way you can stop the guy is keep him off base," Foote said of Brock.

"The pressure is on the catcher, too, because you don't want to be the guy who goes in the book for his 105th."

The sweep moved the Cards to within two games of front-running Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Reggie Smith hit two home runs and Joe Torre belted one to lead the Cardinals in the opener, while a pair of two-run doubles by Ken Reitz led the attack in the second game.

Jim Rooker, 11-10, pitched a six-hitter for the Pirates and also contributed with the bat. His double started Pittsburgh on its way to a seven-run outburst in the fifth inning, and his two-run single capped that rally.

Richie Zisk's bases-loaded triple was the big hit in the middle of the Pirates' seven-run explosion.

John Montefusco, promoted to the Giants on Monday from their Phoenix farm club, took over with none out in the first inning and the Giants trailing 4-2 and checked the Dodgers on just one run the rest of the way for the San Francisco victory.

The Giants moved in front 6-4 in the second when Dodger starter Doug Rau issued three walks and then Gary Matthews hit the first grand-slam of his career. They added two runs in the third when Montefusco, in his first time at bat of the year, hit a two-run homer.

The Reds scored a pair of runs in the ninth to beat Houston. Pinch-hitter Terry Crowley led off with a walk and moved to third on an errant pickoff throw. Crowley held third when Pete Rose beat out a high hopper to shortstop for a single, but came home on Joe Morgan's single.

Mike Lum drove in the tie-breaking run and then scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth inning for the Braves, who added four unearned runs in the eighth.

John Milner drove in the only runs of the Mets-Cubs opener with a homer and a single, then highlighted a five-run rally in the seventh inning of the nightcap with a two-run single as the Mets extended their winning streak to six games.

Baseball Tryouts Set at Whalley

WHALLEY — Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League will hold a baseball tryout session for players of 16 to 21 years Sunday, Sept. 8, at Whalley Stadium. Players, who should take their own equipment to the evaluation camp, may obtain additional information from Ken Yads (876-1949) in Vancouver.

In Canada it's Tilden

Airports Across The Country: More stations than anyone else. Tilden operates more stations at more airports than any of its competitors. Travellers—especially businessmen—take advantage gladly.

Miss Canada A Symbol: One symbol of Canada's beauty and accomplishment is Blair Lancaster, Miss Canada 1974. Tilden is happy to have been selected to provide transportation to Miss Canada throughout the year.

Sept-Iles: An original Tilden station. In 1957 we opened a temporary storage station in a barn. Soon after, we moved into permanent quarters and brought with us this funny, nostalgic souvenir.

Montreal: Our President does more than preside—Ted Tilden, President of Tilden Rent-a-car System picks at least three GM cars a week at random for a test drive. It keeps us on our toes.

Regina: Delayed four hours by bad flying weather, a Calgary man presumed his Tilden car would be unavailable. "To my surprise, your representative was waiting for me at 3 in the morning. It is gratifying to know there still are people who display such personal interest." At Tilden, we may doze while waiting, but we do wait.

Winnipeg: A Toronto traveller arriving late at night, found his confirmed hotel reservation cancelled. The Tilden airport counter representative, from whom he was renting a car, got on the phone and finally found a room nearby. Later, the customer wrote . . . "This is the type of employee we all wish to have". Tilden has them.

We're a Canadian company and we've been in business nearly 50 years. In that time we've developed a unique, Tilden way of doing things — though whether it's uniquely Canadian, we can't say. We just know customers appreciate it. Because at Tilden we believe in excellence overall. We believe in being sincere, not slick. We believe in saying "Thank You" to customers. Maybe that's why we've become the biggest car rental system in Canada. And maybe that's why customers remain loyal. And maybe that's why travellers around the world say: "In Canada, it's Tilden".

Aussie Yachtsman Predicts Cup Win

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — The head of the Australian syndicate owning Southern Cross, challenger for the Americas Cup, says his yacht will beat United States defender, Courageous, four races to three.

Aland Bond, on a visit home from Newport, R.I., told a news conference Tuesday: "We are equal to Courageous in light winds and have a definite advantage in medium-to-heavy winds."

Bond, a millionaire property developer in Western Australia, said American yachtsman were piling on psychological pressure at Newport prior to the start of the Americas Cup races Sept. 10.

"They are trying to make us psychologically uneasy," he said.

"But we will still win. We will beat them four to three."

Bond said Southern Cross' skipper, Jim Hardy, and his crew were confident.

"We said we would annihilate France in the Cup elimination series and we did," Bond said. "I believe we will win the Americas Cup."

Bond told questioners that Dennis Conner, helmsman of the Courageous, whom Bond accused last week of using rough tactics, would not be a problem for the Australian yacht.

"He has to sail closely to the rules. He will not be able to bend the rules because he is going to be closely watched."

In the 1970 Cup challenge, Australia's Gretel II finished first in the second race in the best-of-seven series against America's Intrepid, but was disqualified because of a collision at the start. This time, unlike 1970, there will be an international jury to hear any protests.

Ex-Champions Win in Open

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Two former title holders, Ken Rosewall and Arthur Ashe, overcame youthful Latin competitors and smashed into the men's quarter-finals Tuesday in the United States Open tennis championships.

Rosewall, 39, an Australian who made his U.S. debut 22 years ago, called on all his court craft and savvy in a 6-1, 6-7, 7-5, 6-3 victory over 21-year-old Raul Ramirez of Mexico.

Ashe, 39, winner of the first U.S. Open title here in 1968, solved Guillermo Vilas' left-handed spin service after the first set and beat the 22-year-old Argentinian clay court sensation 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

Ashe, seeded No.8, will play second-seeded John Newcombe, the defending champion, who beat Ray Moore of South Africa 6-3, 6-2, 7-5.

Rosewall's next foe will be Vijay Amritraj, the stately Indian who eliminated fourth-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden last week and then knocked off Marty Riessen of the U.S. 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. Riessen was seeded 11th.

Team Tennis Final Slated at Nanaimo

Oak Bay Tennis Club takes on a North Island All-Star team at 10 a.m. Sunday at Nanaimo's Bowen Park in the Vancouver Island Men's "A" Division team final.

Leading Oak Bay, which won the South Island championship, will be captain Marty Taylor and the rest of the squad is Tony Simnett, John Nichol, Bob Hutton, Max Low and Trevor Jones.

The North Island team is headed by Canadian badminton rep Geoff Harris and his Courtenay clubmate Neil Coutts. Kerry Bourdon of Campbell River, Steve Yesowich of Port Alberni and Ron Mitchell and Greg Fox, both of Nanaimo, complete the team.

The Island women's team final, originally set for the same day, has been postponed and will be played some time in October.

Canadians Tie Series

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Canada kept its hopes alive in a best-of-three field hockey series by defeating Argentina 2-1 Tuesday.

Canada lost Saturday's series opener by the same score.

Third game in the playoff to decide the American representative in next year's World Cup competition will be played Thursday.

GOALIE WANTS MILLION

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers have been sued for $1-million by goalie Michel Belhumeur, who charges they failed to pay him $23,500 in playoff dividends.

Belhumeur, who played last season with the American Hockey League's Richmond Robins, the Flyers' No. 1 farm club, filed suit Aug. 8, claiming he was not paid $19,000 guaranteed to each member of the Stanley Cup team by the National Hockey League and $4,500 promised by the Flyers.

The suit contends Belhumeur, 25, and Philadelphia "had agreed that the plaintiff would receive a full share of playoff bonus money equal to that of any other hockey player on the team, whether or not the plaintiff was on the active roster of the Philadelphia Flyers or Richmond or any other team owned or controlled by the Flyers."

Confucius Say . . . Mao Misquoted

PEKING — The gospel of Chinese communism, the selected works of Chairman Mao, may soon be revised to remove a number of approving references to the ideological guiding spirit of an earlier age, the ancient sage Confucius.

A document purporting to be a directive of the Communist marty's central committee, now circulating in the foreign community here, acknowledges that the chariman's essays and speeches contain numerous quotations from the sage, but lays the blame on two disgraced party figures, Liu Shao-chi and Shen Po-ta, and pledges that the quotations will be excised.

The Confucian references in the chairman's works apparently have become an issue as a result of the year-old ideological rectification drive, the campaign to criticize Lin Piao and Confucius, in which the sage is presented as an out-and-out reactionary whose philosophical tenets inspired Mao's former heir, Lin, to mount his alleged coup attempt in 1971.

The eight-page document that has come into the hands of diplomats indicates that the apparent discrepancy — Mao leading a campaign to vilify Confucius when his own works "approve him" — has caused disquiet in some party circles. Listed as directive number 24 in a series of at least 28 that have been issued by the central committee since the anti-Confucius campaign opened, the document refers to tracts circulating in at least three South China provinces — Kwangtung, Kwangsi and Fukien — that draw attention to the Confucian references.

These tracts, the document alleges, are the work of anti-Maoist elements. It says the truth is that Chairman Mao was busy at the time when most of his works were produced and left the detailed editing to Liu and Chen, who introduced the Confucian material to discredit him.

Liu held the post of president when he was purged at the outbreak of the cultural revolution in 1966 and is widely believed to have died of cancer about 18 months ago. Chen, for years one of Mao's closest associates and his personal secretary, played a prominent role in the cultural revolution but has been purged since.

The fact that some of the Confucian references in Mao's writing appear in texts dating back to the earliest days of the revolution in the 1920s and 30s presents no apparent problem for the official expositors. Official denunciations of Liu and Chen have already represented them as subversive elements from the beginning—traitor who were fully capable of insinuating bourgeois poison into the scripts of the party leader.

One of the Confucian references, albeit indirect, is contained in what is probably the most famous of all Mao's utterances. "Revolution," he wrote in 1926, "is not a dinner party, or writing an essay, or painting a picture, or doing embroidery, it cannot be so refined, so leisurely and gentle, so temperate, kind, courteous, restrained and magnanimous " — these last the virtues of Confucius as taught to Chinese children through the centuries.

Not all the references are so indirect. A number of essays contain direct quotations from the analects, a compilation of Confucian teachings, and in a speech to the party's military affairs committee in 1959. Mao is even quoted as saying that "We are not Confucius, but we see that even Confucius made mistakes, so we may conclude that all men without exception . . ."

While the directive's explanations might trouble those uninitiated into the complexities of the Marxist dialectic, with its capacity for resolving apparent contradictions, it is entirely characteristic of the concern Communist parties traditionally show for historical consistency. This concern was further emphasized during the last week with a fresh article in the People's Daily seeking to debunk the "myth" of Lin Piao's military genius.

Studies of the Chinese civil war have persuaded Western military historians that Lin was an extraordinarily gifted strategist and this war for a long time the official party line.

But while instructors at West Point continue to lecture on his campaigns the People's Daily is busily demonstrating to the home audience that Lin was a dangerous incompetent who would have handed victory to the nationalists had it not been for the supervision of Mao.

Thus, in the latest article, the paper alleges that the Peking-Tientsin campaign of 1948 was not a Lin triumph as previously represented, but an example of how Chairman Mao obviated Lin's bungling. Mao, it said, favored a policy of encircling the nationalists and closing off the enemy's escape routes while Lin, a coward, wanted only to "make a show of force." Mao's line ultimately prevailed, but not before large numbers of enemy forces had utilized the escape route to the sea opened to them by Lin.

NATURAL GAS CUT WARNED

Jack Robertson, the director, said that residential natural gas users in the northwest will have "adequate supplies" through the winter.

But he said industrial users supplied on an interruptible basis face a shortage.

He said the shortage is expected primarily because of cutbacks in natural gas supplies from Canada.

Robertson urged that industrial users immediately fill their storage tanks, attempt to expand their storage facilities, and check their burner equipment for possible conversion to alternate fuels.

He also urged natural gas suppliers to increase storage facilities and to plan for an increased flow of alternate fuel to the northwest.

Robertson said the use of leased tankers or barges could increase storage capacity.

Although no shortage is expected for residential users, Robertson said, "We are asking everyone to conserve as much as possible."

He said he has asked natural gas companies to "cease all promotion that might increase demand." The companies have been helpful in that regard, he said.

Arrested, Shot Same Day: Chile

The accompanying story by Joseph Novitski about the apparent summary execution of two Chileans was withheld from publication by Washington Post editors for two days because of threats against Novitski made by Chilean officials in Santiago.

The threats never were specific, but it is known that the government prepared an expulsion decree against Novitski last June which it never put into effect. Novitski is a special correspondent of The Post.

On Saturday, Novitski was told by security officials that he was under house arrest. He was ordered not to make any efforts to gather news or to transmit news stories to Washington. The house arrest was lifted Saturday night and Novitski was told that he was free to pursue his profession in accordance with the credentials issued by the Chilean government.

By JOSEPH NOVITSKI
Washington Post

SANTIAGO, Chile — Two men arrested by government investigators two weeks ago in a small Chilean town near Santiago died the day they were detained, each with one bullet in his head, according to the records of the Santiago Court of Appeals.

The court, in two recent decisions, agreed to extend a form of judicial protection to the widows and daughters of the dead men, both of whom were members of Marxist political parties that had supported the late President Salvador Allende.

The court action, agreeing to consider a plea to prevent any arrest order for the widows, laid onto the public record what appeared to have been the first summary executions in many months in Chile.

It is understood that military authorities have ordered an investigation into the incident, but neither the court decisions nor any announcement of an official investigation have been published in Chilean newspapers.

The military junta that last September overthrew Allende, a specialist, prohibited summary executions early this year. Furthermore, so far as is known, none of the death sentences handed down by courtsmartial have been carried out since Feb. 13. Since that date, nine death sentences for political offenses have been commuted by military commanders.

However, Dr. Hector Garcia, 50, a physician and member of the socialist party, and Ruben Lamich, a 43-year-old contractor and member of the Communist Party, died without trial while under official custody, according to the cases considered by the appeals court. The two men, according to the files that bear docket numbers 967-74 and 930-74, were detained separately on Aug. 13, in Buin, a semirural town just south of Santiago. Their bodies were returned to their families through the Santiago morgue; Garcia on Aug. 14 and Lamich on Aug. 15.

On petition by the widows of the two men, the Appeals Court agreed last week to ask military and police authorities if there are any orders to arrest the women or their children. There has been no answer yet.

Mrs. Maria D. Garcia, the doctor's widow, told the court her husband was detained at the Buin hospital, where he worked, on the morning of Aug. 13. She said he had been interrogated briefly, in her presence, shortly before dawn on the same day, when eight men in civilian clothes and two uniformed policemen came to the Garcia home in a police car.

Garcia's death certificate, cited in the petition, gave the time of his death as 10:30 a.m., Aug. 13, a little over one hour after he had been detained. Mrs. Garcia told the court that at about the same time, an army officer at the regimental base at San Bernardo told a lawyer and a friend of the family that the regiment knew nothing of Garcia's arrest.

Mrs. Garcia said her brother, Candido Garcia, was called to the Buin Police Station on Aug. 14 and told that Dr. Garcia was dead. Garcia was given the dead doctor's personal identification papers. Later that day he located the doctor's body in the Santiago morgue.

The autopsy report, cited in the court record, declared that Garcia died as a result of one bullet wound in the forehead. It also mentioned bruises on his arms and legs and a cut on his jaw.

The Court of Appeals has limited access to the record of the petition for protection from arrest made by Mrs. Lamich, the widow of the dead contractor. Court sources reported that the record showed he had been arrested on the same day in Buin and had died as a result of one shot in the head. The secretary of the court said the court had agreed to consider her plea and had ordered the minister of the interior, who is titular head of the plainclothes police in Chile, and the commander of the Santiago military garrison, which includes Buin, to report if any arrest order has been issued for Mrs. Lamich.

If an arrest order has been issued for either Mrs. Garcia or Mrs. Lamich, the court will consider issuing a preventive writ habeas corpus, which would enjoin authorities not to arrest the women or their children. Some wives of political supporters of President Allende have been detained in the 11 months since he was overthrown. Minors have also been detained for political offenses.

Of the 1,008 habeas corpus petition considered this year by the appeals court here, all but one of those entered on behalf of people detained for political reasons have been turned down by the court. The one writ that was granted, in the case of a 14-year-old boy, was overturned by the Supreme Court after it had heard arguments from the Ministry of Interior that the boy had been a member of the Communist Party Youth and an active supporter of Allende's government. He is still detained.

Passenger Train Travel Growing

OTTAWA (CP) — Railway Officials are pleased but cautious about figures showing an upswing in passenger train travel this year.

Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways sources say they are still evaluating statistics showing the passenger increase and are unwilling to guess whether this indicates a long-term upward climb.

They agree rising fuel prices may be partly responsible for the jump in passenger traffic. But one CN source said improved equipment on some routes may be another factor.

Passenger traffic has fallen steadily since the early 1960s except for a sudden boom in 1967 when Canada's centennial year and Expo 67 stimulated tourism.

A CN spokesman said that Montreal-Toronto passenger business has risen eight per cent in the first six months this year from the same period last year.

The fast Turbo train was reintroduced in January on the Montreal-Toronto run after technical problems were cleared up. The Turbo has since been operating without any trouble.

Business has climbed 15 per cent in the Toronto-Windsor, Ont., region. The improved Tempo train has been operating in that area about two years.

Passenger traffic surged on the Montreal-Ottawa route in August when the Turbo was put on for a morning run. CN officials say business was six per cent higher from Ottawa to Montreal and 25 per cent higher from Montreal to Ottawa than in the same month last year.

There are some gloomier figures. Traffic on the CN trans-continental trains between Montreal and Vancouver has remained unchanged while it has declined six per cent in the Maritime provinces.

A CP Rail spokesman said passenger business has risen this year but the railway had not yet compiled final figures.

Tourist traffic has risen and may partly account for the increase in passenger train travel, he said.

Statistics Canada figures for travel between the United States and Canada for the first six months of the year reveal a sharp drop in automobile travel and an increase in trips on public transport.

Unions Demand Cash

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — An Australian union official said Tuesday seven maritime unions had demanded and received $28,000 before they allowed a freighter with a foreign crew, including Asians, to dock at Sydney. E. V. Elliott, secretary of the Seamen's Union, said the money represented the difference in the wages paid to the crew and that which would have had to be paid to an Australian crew. The money was put into union funds, he said. Labor Minister Clyde Cameron said later it is "highly improper" for the money to be paid to the unions rather than given to the foreign crew.

Surprises for Teachers In Environment Program

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Some 25 Victoria teachers returned last week from a rigorous outdoors program, hopeful they can enlighten their students on the intricacies of the environment.

The teachers went to the Strathcona Outdoor Education Centre, Strathcona Lodge, Upper Campbell Lake in July with 308 educators from across the province. For some, it was an unforgettable experience. For others, it was not quite what they had expected.

The program, launched by the department of education as a pilot scheme, was a down-to-earth summer school for teachers. It included environmental studies ranging from alpine regions to the sea, and took in water safety and mountaineering courses, survival in the wilderness, environmental art and recreational skills.

One of the objectives was to instruct teachers in outdoor safety. The text book was discarded for practical training.

For some teachers, it was the first time they had ever been in a kayak, a canoe, walked on alpine plateau, or fended for themselves on wilderness beaches on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Director of the Outdoor Education Centre is Jim Bouldin, who has pioneered outdoor education in B.C. Similar programs have been established in Britain and parts of the United States for years.

The project ran into some problems, according to assistant director Ray Preece.

"Some teachers were extremely fit and others were not," he said. "So you had to change the course a bit to take in the two groups."

"There were others who expected a sort of academic course on the outdoors," he added. "For example, in the mountain training course, some people thought they would be taken up a mountain in a vehicle, not walk there."

"At the start, things were a little disorganized, but the courses quickly improved as the days went by," he said.

Wanda Baird, 2195 Beaverbrooke Place, said she became so interested in her environmental art course that she worked all day at it.

John Frey, 1551 Mileva Lane, and Ian Black, 1039 St. David, praised the quality of instructors.

The instructors, some of the province's top experts on outdoor education and environment, included Geoff Evans, a director of Outward Bound, Brian Creer, director of Canoe Sport-B.C., and Alice Culbert, a top B.C.'s mountaineers.

Others included Roderick Haig Brown, author and conservationist, George Clutesi, Indian artist and writer, Kate Bloomfield, Victoria artist, and Paul Presidente, of the fish and wildlife branch.

Alarm Increases Over Genetic Experiments

LONDON (UPI) — Influential scientists are expressing increasing alarm about the danger of genetic experiments unleashing a global plague as perilous to mankind as nuclear war.

In recent months, scientific groups in Britain and the U.S. have warned of the threat of genetic experiments aimed at changing the structure of bacteria.

In the U.S., 11 eminent biologists temporarily suspended their more dangerous research in July. The National Academy of Sciences urged scientists everywhere to halt work on genetic engineering.

In Britain, the medical research council has called for a temporary halt in all efforts to change the character of bacteria until the risks are known.

The British government asked Lord Ashby, a distinguished scientist, to head an inquiry into the dnagers of genetic experiments with bacteria.

Curious Gather For Evel Sky Ride

Times News Services

TWIN FALLS, Idaho — The 200 toilets are in place, but the Sky-Cycle has yet to be pointed skyward and the Evel Knievel Museum is no more than an unpainted frame in a field of dust.

It is five days before Evel Knievel attempts to hurl himself over the Snake River Canyon, and the curious are gathering.

Richard Federich, 23, and his 21-year-old wife, Jan, drove a day and a half from Mascoutah, Ill., and paid $25 each for the privilege of spending nights between now and Sunday in a former cow pasture.

"We've got a $200 bet that he makes it," Frederich says. "We've been planning to come ever since he said he'd jump the Grand Canyon a couple of years ago."

The "he" on everyone's mind is a 34-year-old motorcycle stuntman from Butte, Mont., who has manoeuvred himself into the deal of his lifetime, $6 million-plus to ride a needle-thin rocket over 1,400 feet of space.

"He's gotta be about the gamest dude there ever was," says Larry Bennett, a Dallas, Tex., truck driver who came to watch the jump and hired on as a security guard at $2.50 an hour. "This is going to be the biggest thing that ever happened for a long time."

Kurds Flee Bombs, Stream Into Camps

KERMANSHAH (Reuter) — more than 80,000 Kurds fleeing Iraqi bombing raids have streamed into a dozen refugee camps established by Iran along its 450-mile western border.

Iran's Red Cross organization, called the Red Lion and Sun Society, says that the numbers crossing the no-man's land border region have increased to 7,000 a day.

Foreign journalists in Tehran for the Asian Games were flown to the refugee camps as part of an Iranian move to call world attention to the magnitude of the problem.

Tehran newspapers have also published editorials criticizing an alleged lack of interest shown by the International Red Cross and the United Nations High Commission for Refugees in the situation.

The refugee problem arises from a long and bitter dispute between the Arab rulers of Iraq and the Kurds who are seeking autonomy for their mountainous homeland in the north of Iraq. The Kurds have rejected government proposals for limited self-rule.

WATCHING CONFLICT

Neighboring states are watching the conflict closely, partly because of a recent flood of Soviet military equipment into the country.

Red Lion and Sun Society officials, concerned over a possible Bangladesh-scale refugee influx, said Iran had coped with it alone for the last eight months but the flow is reaching the level where help is needed.

The society's special representative for refugees, Dr. Sohrab Shaybani, said Iran is the only country assisting the refugees. Turkey had closed its border to them.

The largest refugee camp is at Siryas, 35 miles from the border. The camp, built for 3,000, now houses 12,600 people in long lines of tents.

Political Honeymoon Ends

ATHENS (UPI) — Premier Constantine Caramanlis' political honeymoon has ended with the formation of a leftist party pledged to battle his new civilian government for power.

Andrease Papandreou, a former cabinet minister, created the Panhellenic Socialist Movement Tuesday, and criticized Caramanlis for failing to purge his administration of military influence since taking power six weeks ago.

"The government should cleanse the state machinery and the army of the junta elements and punish those who committed crimes and those responsible for the Cyprus disaster," Papandreou said.

The 57-year-old former Berkeley, Calif., professor said, "without such cleansing there can be no genuine elections, with which to produce a genuine democratic government."

The Greek-led military coup that ousted Archbishop Makarios as president of Cyprus July 15 backfired when Turkey invaded the Mediterranean island five days later.

The Athens military junta stepped aside July 23 and called Caramanlis back from exile to form a new civilian government. The four-time premier promised elections as soon as the Cyprus crisis was solved.

Last Saturday, he made his first formal public appearance and told hundreds of thousands of cheering Greeks in Salonica he would announce elections sooner than expected if political leaders and the press show maturity.

The premier defended himself against go-slow charges, saying it was impossible "to undo within a month what has been done within seven years" of military rule.

He said critics, such as Papandreou, demanding rapid change "apparently wish to ignore the mass and dimensions of the problems we inherited."

Papandreou, son of the late premier George Papandreou, was minister of economic coordiantion in his father's cabinet. He left Greece in 1968 after the military seized power.

Papandreou also called for Greece's withdrawal from all eastern political, military and economic alliances, including Caramanlis pulled Greece's troops out of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization because of its failure to stop Turkish advance on Cyprus, but has refused to withdraw from the political structure of the alliance.

At 20 She Had No Future

TOKYO (AP) — Dressed in a kimono far too big for her wasted body and clutching a doll, Kumiko Matsunaga smiled wanly for the photographer on her 20th birthday.

For young Japanese, becoming 20 is an event, an occasion for celebration. Jan. 15 each year is a national holiday to mark "Coming of Age Day" for the several million youths who have reached that milestone.

But Kumiko had no future. In 1956, at the age of five, she had been stricken by mercury poisoning said to have been caused by the wastes from a chemical firm in her native Minamata, a town in Kyushu, the southernmost main Japanese island.

On her 20th birthday, in 1971, her hands and feet were distorted, she was bedridden, and she weighed little more than a child, 46 pounds.

DEATH MARK SET

On Aug. 25 this year, 18 years after her travail began, she died in a Minamata hospital of pneumonia. Within a few hours on the same day, 34-year-old Masajiro Hiraki, also being treated for the effects of mercury poisoning, died too. Newspapers said their deaths brought to 100 the number of Minamata sufferers who had died since 1954.

In 1973, a district court found the chemical company, Chisso Corp. guilty of professional negligence and ordered it to pay 138 persons a total of more than $3 million for illnesses induced by the mercury wastes. The firm later paid fishermen $2,142,000 as compensation for losses caused by mercury pollution.

In all, about 2,000 persons in the Minamata area have been diagnosed on heavy mercury poisoning.

The waste mercury poured into Minamata Bay through the factory's sewage system and was gulped into the digestive systems of fish which landed on dinner tables.

College To Benefit?

Donation of a Japanese scholarship to Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific could come out of the visit to Canada by Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka later this month.

Possibility of the donation has been mentioned by officials in the Japanese foreign ministry in Tokyo.

The college will open this month on a 75-acre site on Pedder Bay, 18 miles west of Victoria. Its 100 students come from more than 30 countries.

Tanaka's Sept. 23-26 visit will be the first Japanese-Canadian summit in 13 years. He will visit Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver.

100 Translators Needed

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal government is advertising for 100 translators because of a fourfold increase in spending and staff "since the beginning of the Trudeau years."

The newspaper quotes an advertisement in the Montreal Gazette as saying applicants should "apply immediately."

The Globe and Mail says the budget for the translation program in the state secretary's department is $23,616,000 for the fiscal year ending next March. In 1968-69 the actual expenditure was $4,903,000.

Smokers Fitter—Doctor

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter — Some smokers may be physically fitter than non-smokers, a Danish doctor told the world cardiology congress here.

The conclusion was reached as part of a study on the relationship between physical activity and coronary heart disease among 5,249 men between the ages of 40 and 59, said Dr. Finn Gyntelberg of Bispebjerg Hospital, Copenhagen.

It showed that smokers were in slightly better physical condition than non-smokers.

Moderate cigarette smokers and pipe smokers ranked highest in physical fitness, while cigar and cheroot smokers ranked lowest. Most surprising, the study showed that smokers who inhaled were fitter than those who did not.

Firm Denies Breaking Strike

R. M. Mills, manager of the firm's western operations, said Noranda was granted an injunction by the B.C. supreme court last July confirming the companies right to move materials across picket lines.

Mills said the strike since June 1 by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers had affected deliveries to Noranda Metal Industries Inc., a manufacturing operation in Bellingham, Wash.

"Deliveries to this U.S. company have always been made for New Westminster," said Mills, "and it is the U.S. company which hires contract truckers to make deliveries.

"Often the contract has been made with a Canadian trucking firm but because of the strike against the New Westminster plant, the Bellingham company which is not on strike, contracted with a U.S. firm," Mills added.

Mills said the strike has continued despite a company offer to increase the base rate by $1.45 an hour to $5.59 and the tradesmen's rate by $1.78 to $7.45.

A charge that the company was importing strikebreakers from the U.S. was made Friday by CAIMAW secretary-treasurer Jess Succamore.

Ford Prices Up 8 to 18%

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. dealers have started selling 1975 models a month early with price tags up as much as 18 per cent over 1974 on the luxury Lincoln Continental.

The No. 2 automaker gave the go-ahead to dealers Friday to begin taking orders and delivering cars at tentative 1975-model prices averaging 8 per cent across the board. Only six lines of larger models are being offered prior to the regular introduction day, Sept. 27.

Ford made the move in response to dealer pressure as supplies of large 1974 models began running low. General Motors, feeling the same pressure, put its 1975 models on sale a week ago with price hikes averaging 8.2 per cent but as much as 14.5 per cent on some models.

Tomatoes Stay Green? Think of Them as Fruits

By HILDA BEASTALL

Green tomatoes may be a way of life the next few weeks for gardeners who, for one reason or another, are unable to get their fruits ripened on the plants before frost.

The key to getting the most value from green tomatoes is to consider them as fruits, not vegetables.

A green fruit — what shall we suggest? Suppose it was green apples in full supply, or rhubarb, or plums — how shall we use them?

Apple pie most certainly, rhubarb conserve, a relish, a thick sauce for cold meats . . . there we are, well started.

Recipes you have on hand for various preserves, pickles, or conserves may serve your purpose. You substitute green tomatoes in equal amounts for apples or rhubarb for instance.

Here are two conserves adjusted from wartime recipes, substituting green tomatoes for rhubarb. Contrary to my usual rule. I have not tested these recipes. We seldom use pickles.

These two, however, contain no vinegar, and who knows before the season is over I shall be glad to use the tailend of our tomato crop in these conserves. They sound good, and will perhaps act as a guide for the more adventurous.

GREEN TOMATO FRUIT CONSERVE

1 orange
1½ cups water
4 to 5 medium tomatoes, green (1 pound)
1 cup brown sugar
¼ cup dark raisins
¼ cup round peanuts
few grains of salt

Wash and cut the orange into quarters, remove seeds. Add water; simmer 20 to 30 minutes until skin is tender.

Add sugar, raisins and salt. Boil gently, stirring as needed, until mixture thickens on spoon. Add finely chopped nuts after the mixture has cooled for 5 minutes.

Make this small amount first as a trial run. You can double or treble the amounts later; or you can add another orange, more raisins, and less sugar. Whatever proportions are used, simmer mixture until it thickens and coats the spoon well.

GREEN TOMATO GOLDEN RELISH

2 cups carrots
2 cups celery and leaves
1 green pepper
1 red pepper
2 large green tomatoes
1 cup water, approximately
1 Tbsp sugar

Wash, trim and cut all vegetables, using a sharp knife on a cutting board. You want one-eighth-inch pieces, not ground mash.

Dissolve sugar in water in pan, add all vegetables.

Bring to boil; simmer until vegetables begin to soften but are not mushy. Add a little salt to taste.

Pour into hot sterilized jars or glasses having sealer tops. If not enough liquid to cover the relish in the jars, add a little boiling water. Seal tightly. Invert, and check for several days for a seal.

Because this is not a thick conserve, you use it during fall, keeping the jars in the refrigerator. Make more from green tomatoes later in the season. By substituting cider vinegar for water in the Golden Relish Recipe you know it will keep for a longer period.

GREEN TOMATO FRUIT PIE

Make pastry for 2-crust pie
2 cups thinly sliced green tomatoes
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 Tbsp. demerara sugar
1 Tbsp wheat germ
a pinch of ginger
1 Tbsp. chopped angelica leaf if you have it

Line pie plate with pastry. Layer one cup of sliced tomatoes. Sprinkle with half the amounts of remaining ingredients. Spread remainder of sliced tomatoes and sprinkle remaining ingredients.

Bake in 375-deg. oven for 15 minutes; reduce to 350 deg. until a golden brown, about 20 minutes more.

Here again, experiment a little. Add an apple to some pies; or use a few raisins with the tomatoes.

The golden fruited tomatoes make a lovely pie, but they are almost too good to cook. They deserve to be seen in slices on salads and enjoyed that way for their flavor is superb.

Be adventurous; be imaginative. The first hurdle in coping with green tomatoes is surmounted when you say "these are fruits."

HEARTY hot snacks for guests or family are cheese and ham roll-ups which can be prepared in advance and quickly deep-fried before serving.

Here's Hot Idea For Party Snack

Need an idea for hot finger-food for your next party? Cheese and Ham Roll-Ups can be prepared in advance and quickly deep-fried just before serving. A substantial snack for hungry guests — or even for a hungry family.

HAM AND CHEESE ROLL-UPS

1 cup shredded edam or gouda cheese
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
½ teaspoon prepared hot mustard
6 slices cooked ham
6 thin slices bread
½ cup flour
2 eggs
2 Tablespoons milk
1 cup bread crumbs
Oil for deep-frying
Salt

Cream shredded cheese, mayonnaise and hot mustard together. Remove crusts from bread; flatten slices. Spread each slice of bread and each slice of ham with cheese mixture. Place one slice of ham, cheese-side up on each cheese-spread slice of bread. Roll them up tightly; secure with a pick if necessary (cut each in half, if desired). Roll them in flour. Dip them in mixture of eggs and milk beaten together. Roll them in crumbs. Allow to dry 5 minutes. Heat oil (2 inches deep) in deep frypan or deep fryer to 375 F. Fry rolls for about 2 minutes until they are golden. Drain on paper towels. Sprinkle with salt. Serve immediately. Makes 6 large or 12 small rolls.

Also good to look at and delicious-tasting, cheese Sesame Log combines the delcate flavor of gouda with the crunchy, toasted sesame seed coating. Perfect for parties, it keeps well in the refrigerator and can be prepared several days in advance.

SESEAME LOG

¾ cup sesame seeds
3 cups (12 ounces) shredded gouda cheese
1 cup butter, softened
1 teaspoon prepared hot mustard
2 tablespoons gin
OR
1 tablespoon chutney sauce

Toast sesame seeds in 350 degree oven 5 to 10 minutes until golden. Cream shredded gouda and butter together until smooth. Blend in mustard and gin. Shape into one large log with diameter about 1½ inches or into several small balls. Roll in toasted sesame seeds, generously coating log or balls. Wrap with plastic. Refrigerate until about ½ hour before serving. Serve with cream crackers or rye wafers, radishes and relishes. Insert half a pretzel stick into each ball before serving, if desired. Makes one 8-inch log or about 18 small balls.

Meningitis Shots Arrive

SAO PAULO (AP) — Government doctors began inoculating Brazilians with meningitis vacine that arrived from the U.S. Monday as health authorities reported 11 more deaths from the nerve disease.

They said nine persons died during the weekend in Sao Paulo State, where a two-month epidemic has killed more than 500 by unofficial count. The other two weekend deaths were in Rio de Janeiro.

Health officials said more than 2,000 persons remained in hospital with the disease. Most of the victims have been children.

Tasty Salmon Dishes

Here are 4 new tasty dishes each using 7¾ oz. of the concentrated protein nutrition in B.C. Canned Salmon.

If you've also got any one of six other handy products on the shelf you can easily make any one of these interesting recipes.

WITH SALAD JELLIES

Make up 1 pkg. (3 oz.) Italian Style Salad jelly according to package directions, substituting juices drained from a 7¾ oz. can of B.C. salmon for part of the cold water measurement. When jelly is partially set, add flaked salmon and mashed bones from the can plus approximately ¼ cup finely chopped vegetables such as cucumber, celery, or green pepper. Chill until set. Serves 4-6.

WITH FRIED RICES

Combine 1 pkg. (12 oz.) Curried Style Instant Fried Rice with its packet of seasonings. Add 1 can (7¾ oz.) flaked B.C. salmon with its juices and mashed bones, ½ can (10 oz. size) cream of mushroom soup, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix well; heat, stirring frequently. Serve with sliced tomatoes and lettuce. Serves 4.

WITH SALAD CRISPINS

Drain 1 can (7¾ oz.) B.C. salmon and break into chunks. Divide into 3 portions, placing each on a lettuce leaf. Season lightly. Top each portion with a heaping teaspoon of French Style salad crispins. OR make up your favorite tossed green salad for 4 people. Add 1 can (7¾ oz.) drained and flaked B.C. salmon. Chill. Serve topped with 3 tablespoons French Style salad crispins and cherry tomatoes.

WITH SOUPS

In a saucepan, combine 1 can (7¾ oz.) B.C. salmon, flaked with its juices and mashed bones, with 1 can (10 oz.) cream of vegetable soup and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice. Heat to boiling point; season if desired. Serve over buttered toast or English muffin halves. Serves 4.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: BARBECUED SAUSAGE

By GRACE McKINNON

(Today's reader recipe is a triple bill from Mrs. Percy McKinnon of 1610 Belmont Avenue in Victoria. If you have a favorite or family dish you would like to share, mail the recipe to the Family Desk, The Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria, V8W 2N4.)

The barbecued sausage comes from Alberta. I got it out of a church book there. The reason I like it is the price of meat and everything and it is really tasty — and not greasy.

Only the adults like the cucumber salad — not the boys (Mrs. McKinnon has four of her grandchildren staying with her.)

The gelatin squares are a nice light dessert because you don't put much whipped cream in it — and it's pretty with the white and orange. This came from my sister-in-law in Camrose.

BARBECUED SAUSAGE

Fry one onion and half a cup of celery until soft and transparent. Boil sausages for two minutes to remove excess fat. Brown slightly with onions and celery. Cut into pieces, cover with sause and simmer half an hour.

The sauce is a half cup of ketchup, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon Workestershire sauce, 4 tablespoons vinegar, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard and 1 teaspoon paprika — all mixed with ¾-cup of water.

JELLIED CUKE SALAD

2 pkg. lemon jelly
1½ cup boiling water
4 tbsp. vinegar
Let above mixture partially set then fold in:
2 tbsp. grated onion
2 cups chopped peeled cucumber
1 cup mayonnaise
Let stand one hour. It's a large recipe and can be halved.

GELATIN SQUARES WITH ORANGE SAUCE

Soak two packages gelatin in half a cup of cold water until dissolved. Add 1¼ cup hot water and 1¼ cup sugar. Set aside to jell. Beat six egg whites until stiff. Then heat first mixture. Combine the two, add a few drops of vanilla and a pinch of salt. Beat until fluffy. Pour in 9"x13" cake pan and cool.

Sauce: Take juice of six oranges, put on stove and bring to boil. Thicken with corn starch and cool.

To serve, but the egg mixture into squares and roll in graham wafer crumbs. Pour a tablespoon of sauce on each square and top with a tablespoon of whipped cream.

Birds Alight, Short Circuit

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said Tuesday, "thousands" of the birds had landed on a line near 255 Esquimalt Sunday and shorted the circuit.

Besides shorting power to Esquimalt residents, the power failure affected traffic lights at Douglas and Hillside, he said.

Caesar Salad: a favorite the world over

This Salad Comes, Sees and Conquers

No one knows how Caesar Salad got its name. Some believe it to have originated in Southern California, in the 1920's, others in New York.

Whatever its origin, Caesar Salad is a great favorite the world over.

For an elegant touch, why not prepare the salad at the dinner table? Simply assemble all ingredients. Make sure that you dry the lettuce leaves carefully. Even though we have chosen to use romaine lettuce, you can use a different lettuce or a combination of different kinds of lettuce.

This recipe was created and tested by Pol Martin, Director of the Pol Martin Culinary School. This serves four people.

CAESAR SALAD

2 heads of romaine lettuce, cleaned
1 egg
1 garlic clove peeled and split in two
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
15 anchovy fillets drained and chopped
6 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese
2 cups french garlic croutons

DRESSING

Juice of 2½ lemons
5 to 6 tablespoons oil
A few drops worcestershire sauce

Discard the wilted outside leaves of the lettuce. Dry the lettuce leaves in a lettuce spin-dryer of with paper towels and set aside.

Gently lower the egg into a saucepan filled with boiling water and simmer for 30 seconds. This is called to "coddle an egg". Cool the egg under running water and set aside.

Rub the salad bowl with two pieces of garlic. Discard the garlic after use.

Break the lettuce leaves into bite-size pieces in the salad bowl. Season with salt and pepper.

Mix in the anchovies.

Break the coddled egg into the salad and blend well. Mix in the croutons and the cheese.

Mix in the salad dressing and correct the seasonings.

It's fun to take pictures of important events shown on television. It gives you the opportunity to have a record of visits of foreign dignitaries, Oscar presentations or the upcoming Olympics.

The 8-page pamphlet "Photographing Television Images" explains that you can use almost any camera to take black-and-white pictures of television images. For colour photo, you have to use a camera with an f-2.8 or faster lens and a shutter that can be set at ⅛ second or slower. For movies you need a movie camera with an f-1.9 or faster lens.

The pamphlet also points out that in comparison with average subjects in daylight, TV images are quite dim. Therefore you may want to use high-speed films.

You will also learn how to adjust your television set to obtain high quality shots. Don't use flash or flood lighting, otherwise your pictures might show nothing but a blank screen.

The pamphlet also explains why you should use a shutter speed of 1/30 second or slower to record one complete television picture. If you don't you may get a dark band across your photo. For sharp pictures, snap when the subject on the screen is not moving.

There is also a warning that many television programs are copyrighted. By photographing television images you might infringe on the copyright.

Fine Fare At 100 kph

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

PARIS — Until we took the train from Paris to Lyons a few months ago, we had forgotten that dining on a train can be pleasure enough to be an end in itself. Our greatest frames of reference had previously been a cafeteria-type disaster on an Amtrak train between Boston and New York; a ham and cheese special between New York and Philadelphia, and a bag of peanuts en route from New York City to East Hampton, N.Y.

On the Paris-Lyons express we found ourselves speeding along at 100 and more kilometers per hour in immaculate bright and airy surroundings that were, to quote ourselves, an invitation to the senses.

The table was done up in dazzling napery, the silver was polished and the menu light-years removed from anything we had ever encountered. It included a first course of soupe des pecheurs (fish soup) or quenelles de brochet Dieppoise (poached forcemeat of fish with a white wine and seafood sauce). We chose the soup and found it uncommonly good, although a trifle salty.

We noted that had we been served the same soup on an American train, we would have become positively gluttinous and sent our compliments to the chef. Instead the waiter offered us the quenelles, which were excellent. We proceeded then to roast guinea hen (there had been a choice of the guinea hen or beef and lamb kidney en brochette), admirably cooked, and a fantastic Brazilian bombe with candy coffee beans and whipped cream.

On this present trip we found an occasion to take Le Mistral, which travels to the south of France. We boarded it in Paris at 1:40 p.m., a decent hour to begin a meal for a four-hour ride to Lyons. It is possible on the TEE, or Trans-European-Express, to reserve a seat in the dining car from which you need not move during the course of the trip. After a meal the dinner accoutrements are simply removed and you are left to dawdle over coffee and Cognac or whatever other amusements you may have at hand.

The setting was comfortably familiar. The same comparable starched white linen, polished silver and crystal. And a menu to appeal to the senses. To one American it was impressive in its imagination. As a first course there was a choice of sweetbreads Dijonnaise in a puff pastry shell or snails en brochette. As a main course there was a choice of stuffed chicken or braised beef with a red wine sauce. There was salad, cheese and a choice of sherbet or fresh strawberries in red wine.

The meal which we shared began auspiciously with the sweetbread course. Cubes of the braised delicacy were in a light, well-seasoned sauce along with sliced mushrooms and pieces of well-cooked salt pork. The snails were large and tender and served with a smooth, professionally made veloute of chicken.

The chicken was very well roasted and served with a flavorful pate — like ground pork filling. The steak — coeur du Charolais — was rare, but we had the assurance of one of our dinner companions that while it was quite tender and edible, the flavor, even with a Burgundy wine sauce, was on the bland side. The salad was simple, the cheese well varied and at the proper stage of ripeness. The strawberries were a bit overripe, but the sherbet, made with Cassis, the dark currant cordial of Dijon, was brought nearer perfection with sweetened raspberries.

Negative notes: The coffee was equally as weak as you would find on American trains . . . and a half bottle of Beaujolais tasted just a bit of the cork, although a second was in sound and admirable condition.

Our first-class ticket from Paris to Lyons cost about $23. The cost of the reserved seat in the dining car cost about $5. The cost of the meal was about $7.60. Half bottles of white Burgundy cost about $2; red Beaujolais, $2.60.

In France we applied for our tickets at the French Government Tourist office. They may also be purchased at train stations, and it is best to reserve in advance.

BARBECUED GRAPEFRUIT LATELY?

It's time for outdoor living and days of fun-filled easy barbecue cooking. All summer long you will find fresh grapefruit in abundance. Use them often as a time-saver, giving you extra hours to enjoy the days of relaxation ahead.

If your man for all seasons presides at the barbecue grill, surprise him with Barbecued Grapefruit Au Rhum, a French piece de resistance. You can prepare this summer delight well in advance and store in the refrigerator. Storing actually enhances the rum flavor. Let the chef decide whether to serve at the beginning or end of the meal.

BARBECUED GRAPEFRUIT AU RHUM
(4 servings)

4 California grapefruit halves
4 teaspoons rum
Salt
¼ cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons butter or margarine
4 maraschino cherries.

Prepare each grapefruit half by cutting with sharp or serrated grapefruit knife around each section, loosening fruit from membrane. Cut out centre core. For each grapefruit half, pour 1 teaspoon rum over segments in shell, salt lightly, then sprinkle with 1 tablespoon brown sugar. Put ½ teaspoon butter in centre. Place grapefruit half on square of aluminum foil; double fold on top and secure sides to seal each packet tightly. Place on barbecue over medium coals. Cook for 10 minutes or until butter has melted. Place in serving bowls or on platter; pour any juice remaining in foil over top. Garnish with cherry. Serve with barbecued chicken, pork or ham. May be served as a first course while waiting for meat to cook.

Fishing Boat, Freighter Bump

A Pacific Rescue Centre spokesman said the freighter, Oakland, and 40-foot fishing boat, Oroin, were in heavy fog when they collided at 7:30 a.m.

NEW POTATOES A TASTE TREAT

About this time every year Vancouver Islanders anticipate tiny new potatoes — and what a treat they are! Unfortunately, like most summer vegetables they are never on the market long enough. In fact, after mid-September they're no longer "new", so buy when you see them.

Few people have probably ever considered canning new potatoes, but Agriculture Canada suggests that it is an excellent way to prolong the enjoyment of these tiny spuds.

For canning, new potatoes should be about one and a half to two inches in diameter, fresh, sound and not too mature. Wash them in small quantities at a time, lifting them from the water to remove all the sand. If scraping is necessary, only the thinnest possible amount of skin should be removed. Place the potatoes in a kettle with a lid and cover them with boiling water. Bring to a boil, cover and boil for five minutes. Pack the hot potatoes in pint or quart sealers and cover with the water in which they were cooked leaving a half-inch headspace. Add one-half teaspoon salt to each pint and one teaspoon to each quart. Close the sealers and process in a pressure canner 35 minutes for pints and 40 minutes for quarts.

That's all there is to it and you can savor canned new potatoes until this time next year. To serve, pour the liquid into a pot and add one-quarter teaspoon salt. Bring to a boil, add the potatoes and boil for three to five minutes.

A few mint leaves, a pinch of dried herbs or a bay leaf added to the boiling liquid will add an interesting flavor. Serve with salt, pepper and lots of butter. On another occasion, serve "Cheesed New Potatoes" using either fresh or canned.

'Girl Friend' Label A Joke Turned Sour

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old married woman. I've never had an experience like this in all my life — that's why it's so upsetting to me.

It all started when a co-worker, who must be in his late 40s, starting kidding around at work and calling me his "girl friend." There was nothing to it. It was just a joke. He recently had a 25th wedding anniversary and I sent him and his wife a card. When I was out sick last year, he sent me a card.

Well, one evening last week, out of the blue I got a phone call from his wife. She started yelling and hollering and accusing me of having "an affair" with her husband. I was shocked. Then her husband took the phone away from her and apologized, saying she was having one of her "spells."

I avoided him at work.

Last evening, she called again. This time my husband answered, and again she ranted and carried on about me and her husband. Finally, my husband hung up on her.

Abby, she sounds like a crazy woman. She could even kill me. I love my job but maybe I should quit. How should I handle this?—UPSET.

DEAR UPSET: The woman is either disturbed or she drinks. (Maybe both.) Don't quit your job. There are laws to protect people against harassment of this kind. Have your lawyer write her a letter. (He'll know what to say.) That should do it.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

During my many years of busy practice, I saw some 30 women, most of them in their late teens or twenties, who were suffering from "anorexia nervosa." This means, in Greek, a nervous lack of appetite. Several of them had started to starve themselves when they became very heavy and went on a decided starvation diet.

Curiously, when their weight got down to normal they kept starving themselves until they got down to between 70 and 80 pounds. Strangely, most of them did not seem to worrry over their emaciation.

As was to be expected, most of them were living on the edge of a mental breakdown. A high percentage of them were schizoid — a bit shut-in, unsocial, reserved, shy, and not friendly. Usually I found that one or more of the girls' near relatives had a serious nervous, mental, epileptic, or alcoholic trouble.

I remember two who much wanted to get married; one, an attractive girl, a secretary in New York, was about to be married, when her half-crazy mother, "cracked on religion," and saying that she was dying, forced her to go to Chicago to act as the mother's nurse. There she had to spend her days in a darkened room, where her other read the Bible all day.

Then her father, frightened, brought her to me. On hearing of her tragedy I demanded that he immediately buy a ticket and send her back to her beau, and that day she was cured. For years she kept writing to thank me.

A few other girls, to please their mother, became nuns, but soon they wished they hadn't, and then they starved themselves. In each case, when I got their Reverend Mother to dismiss them, they married and soon were well.

I remember one pretty young woman who I asked if she might be trying to commit suicide, and she said, "Yes." Because of her bad temper, she had lost three fiances in a row. I talked her into trying to find another, and she got up and soon was well.

Some of the women I had apparently cured, after a year or so went back to starvation again.

One older woman got anorexia when she suspected her husband of infidelity, and another stopped eating much when her husband died and left her with many heavy responsibilities. One, an apparently lonely girl, was what I used to call "a relative of the psychotic."

I can remember seeing only four men with anorexia. One thought his food was poisoned, and another told me that Christ had told him not to eat. Another had tuberculosis, and the other, at autopsy, had a cyst in his cerebellum. (A part of the brain.)

A PERSON DEAD?

Today I keep reading articles by lawyers and ministers and others who have an idea that sometimes it is very hard to tell when a person is dead. Some writers feel that in order to be sure, the tiny electric currents that are constantly running through a normal brain should be recorded with an electroencephalograph.

Recently I read that someone sued a surgeon for manslaughter, accusing him of removing a heart for transplantation, before the person was dead. I cannot sympathize with that sort of argument if only because when in 1905 and 1906 I was an intern in a huge city and county hospital, full of dying old people, one of my jobs was to declare people dead and to sign the death certificate. I knew a man was dead when for a while he had no pulse, he did not breathe, and he did not move or complain when I pressed on a very sensitive nerve.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., Sept. 5

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Highlight aggressive philosophy. Get rid of deadwood; finish project. Deal with another Aries — and a Libran. Find better ways to distribute, publicize and advertise. One who leaned on you now lets go — and you feel surge of freedom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take initiative. Improve diet. Work conditions are featured. You get new deal. You can be more independent, but some around you are jealous. Know it and refuse to become embroiled in office squabbles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home, job, basic security — these areas are emphasized. You find that you have a choice. There actually is room for expansion. You have asked for this — even prayed for it — now you have it. Don't waste opportunity by bickering, displaying false pride. You will understand!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your form of talking, hearing changes. That is, you will be with people who illustrate, who are graphic, philosophical, contradictory. You will be puzzled, challenged and stimulated. Be sure of reservations, promises, travel commitments. Double check!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get involved and someone is going to "run up a bill" on you. But you enjoy it and the pace changes — and you feel renewed. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius could be in picture. You find that the price may be right.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Permit one close to you to set pace. You have unusual dealings with young person or unorthodox individual. Lifestyle is affected. Luxury items, art objects may be involved. Unusual investment may dominate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money situation, hanging over from past, could surface. Beware of deception. There is apt to be a coverup. Know it and protect your interests. Insist on information, not speculation or allegation. Pisces, Virgo persons might help show the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Affair of heart dominates. You could become inextricably involved. Know it and don't play games with emotions. Stakes are high and likely to be "for keeps." Older individual causes you to respond, to commit yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finish rather than begin: deal with Aries, Libra persons. Property value may not be stable. Look for hidden clauses. Element of surprise is featured. Family member makes announcement. Maintain balance and sense of humor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Find new places to see — dine out with family member. Relative wants to see you. Break ice and let bygones be bygones. Message will become increasingly clear. Short trip could lead to adventure. Leo and another Aquarian might be involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get co-operation of one experienced in making special purchase. You could overspend if you rely merely on impulse. Know it and do something about it. Emphasis is on what you are able to obtain for your money.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural writer, a person who acts, expresses, is restless, fond of travel and tthe theatre. You are a critic, creative and able to impress others with your thoughts, opinions. You would find drama criticism a fascinating project — or profession. Gemini, Virgo persons play key roles in your life. September will be your most significant month of 1974.

Massive Aid For Bangladesh

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is giving Bangladesh $10 million in wheat and $5 million in rapeseed to help overcome recent flood damage, the Canadian International development Agency has announced.

The wheat is in addition to the agency's regular 1974-75 food aid allocation of $20 million to the South Asian country.

Canada has provided $11 million in rapeseed and rapeseed oil in the last two years, and the agency is working on projects in Bangladesh to help that country increase its own production.

It is also contributing $150,000 to the League of Red cross Societies for flood relief in Bangladesh, India and Nepal.

U.K. Study Scalds Canada For Treatment of Indians

LONDON (CP) — A report by a private research organization specializing in minority rights says Canada has "a long history of failure, parsimony and neglect" to overcome in its treatment of Canadian Indians.

But the report gives some credit to the Trudeau government for the progress Indians have made during the last decade.

The accomplishments of Indian organizations and individuals in that time have been "enormous," says the document published here by the Minority Rights Group (MRG), headed by Jo Grimond, former Liberal party leader.

These "have identified the problems of native people and suggested practical solutions that take account as no government has ever done, of the fundamental social and historical factors underlying the present situation," the report says.

"They have gained power, respect and a great deal of political expertise after a century of being discredited and sapped of initiative and they have given more hope and determination to the Indian community than it has had for 100 years."

The report, written by British social worker James Wilson after he visited Canada to study the Indian situation last year, says Jean Chretien, then minister of Indian affairs, was probably more criticized than any previous holder of that federal portfolio.

But Chretien, now president of the treasury board, helped at the Indian affairs department "to create the atmosphere in which criticism is possible, most notably by giving financial support to national and local Indian organizations."

Chretien, Wilson writes, "had the courage to acknowledge mistakes and even his ferocious debates with Indians show a willingness, markedly absent in earlier administrations, to take the views of native people seriously."

Yet, Wilson states, "despite these encouraging signs there has still not been a major transformation of Indian life."

The report charges that the Indian affairs department remains "a huge and costly vested interest and may, wittingly or unwittingly, obstruct the movement of power and resources to the Indians."

Wilson alleges that the acceptance of educational reform and the adoption of a new approach to land rights "are nothing more than gestures until the new measures have been implemented."

But he concedes that no one else has been able to resolve the Indian question.

LOTTERY SUGGESTED ON SAVINGS BONDS

TORONTO (CP)—Some Toronto business analysts say a lottery based on Canada Savings Bonds might be an attractive means of increasing bond sales and reducing bond redemptions.

Caroline Silsbury of McLeod, Young, Weir and Co. Ltd., said a lottery is "not very dignified," but because it might help stop redemptions she would buy a bond to participate in such a lottery.

She noted that, unlike other lotteries, if a person dtesn't

She noted that, unlike other lotteries, if a person doesn't win on one draw the "ticket" is good for the next draw. The ticket is still a bond and can be redeemed for cash.

The penalty for redemption is that the holder is out of the lottery.

Tanaka in Hospital

TOKYO (AFP) — Premier Kakuei Tanaka entered Teishin hospital Tuesday for a medical checkup and is expected to remain there most of this week, Japanese government sources said today. The premier's secretary said Tanaka is undergoiing the checkup in preparation for his trip to Latin America, the United States and Canada, beginning Sept. 12.

London Sugar Price Soars to $900 a Ton

LONDON (Reuter) — Fears of world sugar shortages gathered momentum Tuesday after the London price for the commodity increased to a record $900 a ton.

London dealers forecast the shortages are likely to continue well into 1975, a year which will probably see continuing high prices, nervous markets and significant changes in world sugar-trading patterns.

Traders were wary about forecasting production levels next year, but one estimate of an increase in world output to 81.6 million tons from 80.17 million tons appeared to reflect the general view.

The estimated increase is about one million tons below the anticipated increase in demand, which has been growing at between three and four per cent a year.

Dealers forecast a further erosion of world stocks, which now are estimated at about 15 million tons — two months' supply.

They forecast only modest production increases of around 200,000 to 300,000 tons in the major exporting countries such as Brazil, Cuba, Australia and South Africa.

The shortage is considered so severe that in Hull, England, British dockers, who refused to handle sugar for export, banned another consignement Tuesday.

The dockers also threatened to extend their export boycott to all other British ports if the sugar is diverted elsewhere.

Some Pretty Annuals Can Be Planted Now

In these days when we gardeners look for the easiest ways to get results, it is comforting to know some flowering annuals can be sown in fall to bloom next summer.

Usually a few leisurely days come around in late September when we have a chance to prepare soil, or prepare now and sow before the end of the month.

The class of annuals to consider for this fall sowing is known as "hardy" annuals. The list is variable since all need a fairly sandy well-drained soil in our climate, or the young seedlings will rot during winter. Or, being in ground which holds winter moisture they may freeze. Admittedly you take a chance but since nature is on the gardener's side, you may win.

As well as drainage you need humus in the form of well rotted compost an inch or two below the surface for there must be something to hold moisture at the roots during the dry spring and summer next year.

This year with its cool but dry early season should remain in our minds to make us aware of these facts of plant life.

In most cases, the seeds may sprout beneath the surface by late fall, sending up seed leaves, make a few roots, then remain practically dormant until spring. Then, because they are already acclimatized to outdoor conditions, the new shoots come quickly, and grow into plants to flower as early as any you could start in a greenhouse for transplanting outdoors. And the hazard of a cool spring is not so great with your fall sown annuals.

This is a varied list for height, color and flower shapes, as well as flowering periods from late spring throughout summer into fall.

Of the list, the only difficult kind to transplant is the California-poppy. Like all poppies, eschscholtzia has a toproot with no mass of fine hairs which make moving easy with other plants.

Sow these and all poppy seeds in a place where you want them to flower. A deep prepared, sandy soil will be ideal for the long season you give them by sowing in September will get them deeply rooted. Thus they make fine flowering plants early next summer.

You can see self-sown California-poppy plants every year among the rocks along the Johnson Street extension.

Perhaps the seeds came here on freight cars from California during goldrush days.

Sow the hardy annual seeds well-spaced so that if necessary they can stay where they are for flowering. If you have spaces a foot square in borders, sow the half dozen seeds there of one kind. In spring you take out all but three plants without disturbing the ones remaining.

Try a fall sowing of two or three annuals this September. You may have good results. You will at least find out which will do best under your soil and general garden conditions.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is the adage about the folly of putting all of your eggs in one basket. In today's deal, which came up in a rubber-bridge game, our South declarer committed this folly. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

After winning the opening lead with his king of spades, South promptly led the jack of diamonds. When West followed with the four, the three was played from dummy and East played the five-spot. East made a nice play when he declined to take his king. Had he taken it, dummy would have had five cashable diamond tricks.

When the jack won the trick, declarer made the optimistic assumption that West was the possessor of the diamond king. It was an unsound assumption to make, for surely if East had, let us say, the tripleton K-x-x of diamonds, he would not have captured the jack.

With the diamond jack capturing trick two, declarer then led his remaining diamond and finessed the board's queen. When East now took his king, dummy's four remaining diamonds were all uncashable winners. At the conclusion of play, South had incurred a defeat that could (and should) have been averted.

After capturing the opening spade lead, declarer's proper play was the diamond finesse that he actually took. But he should have put up dummy's queen on his own jack, instead of playing low off the board. With the queen winning, a heart would then be led, and South's queen would be finessed. With this finesse winning, South would now have his contracted-for nine tricks: four spades, two hearts, two diamonds and one club.

Having a guaranteed contract at this point, declarer would not jeopardize it in this situation by taking another diamond finesse. He would, instead, eventually lead his remaining diamond to dummy's ace—and would fell East's king. All 13 tricks would now be made by declarer—a just reward for correct play.

Of course, if the heart finesse had lost, declarer would in this case have no real chance except to fall back on the diamond finesse. But this latter play should have been a last resort, rather than a first choice.

Turner, Simon to Talk Money

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner will fly to Washington Monday to confer with United States Secretary of the Treasury William Simon on economic and energy problems, government sources said here Wednesday.

Simon was the U.S. energy czar before being moved into the key post of secretary of the treasury. Turner has not met with the senior American cabinet minister since he assumed that position and will go to the American capital to exchange views on the current world financial crisis.

Later in the week Turner will make a trip to western Canada to discuss with the Alberta government the provisions in his last budget — which was never adopted — as they apply to oil companies.

Indications that there could be changes made in the tax provisions of the federal budget to be introduced into the new parliament, with regard to oil companies, were suggested here Wednesday as the Canadian finance minister prepared for his first meeting with the Alberta government since the election. He wants to talk to members of the Alberta cabinet face-to-face to hear their objections.

Turner is making a trip to Western Canada Sept. 13 and 14. He will address a meeting of the Canadian club Sept. 13 in Vancouver. On his way back to Ottawa Saturday, Sept. 14 he will meet with Alberta's Minister of Federal and Intergovernmental Affairs D. R. Getty and Provincial Treasurer Gordon Miniely in Edmonton.

Later in the fall, probably in mid-October, Turner plans to return to B.C. to meet with representatives of that province's government. He also hopes to visit Manitoba and Saskatchewan for intergovernmental meetings at that time.

Turner in a brief telephone interview refused to say what if any changes he would be making in the budget to be introduced into the new parliament. He stressed that his talks with the Alberta government will be in the nature of "discussions, not negotiations."

"I want to go out and have a talk with the Alberta ministers. I want to hear at first hand what their objections are to the budgetary provisions. I have nothing to say at this time about possible changes, if any, in the budget," he added.

However other sources close to the finance minister expressed some surprise over a story out of Calgary last week reporting that Jack Austin, provincial secretary to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, had suggested there would be no changes in the budget as it applies to the oil industry. One member of the department said wryly, "It's my understanding we still have ministerial government, correct me if I'm wrong."

Maggie Hicks was found cold, hungry and dirty by a rescue party about 15 miles from her home. She was admitted to hospital where she was reported in fair condition suffering from exposure.

"She has always been a goer," said her daughter, Viola McGhee.

"All she said was she wanted a glass of water and a cup of hot coffee," said Lonnie Wilson, a member of the rescue squad.

He said she apparently survived by eating mountain berries and apples.

"There's copperheads snakes up there," he added. "We killed 10 in two days while looking for her."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Four-year-old John Cash, son of country music stars Johnny and June Carter Cash, was improving Tuesday after suffering a skull fracture in a traffic accident.

The boy was injured Monday when the jeep in which he was riding overturned.

GENEVA — American financier Bernard Cornfeld, facing charges of fraud, forgery and dishonest management, attended court hearings here Tuesday after returning to Switzerland for the first time since he was released on a record bail of $16.8 million last April, legal sources reported.

Cornfeld, 47, is charged in connection with the collapsed multi-million-dollar mutual funds empire, Investors Overseas Services (IOS), which he founded and headed until 1970.

CHICAGO — A little thinner and a little grayer, Mayor Richard Daley returned to his office for the first time in four months Tuesday and announced in a voice softer than his usual rasp that he may seek a sixth term.

Daley has been recuperating from arterial surgery performed last June to prevent a recurrence of a mild stroke he suffered in May. The mayor said he has lost 25 to 30 pounds and is "feeling fine."

LIDA JUNCTION, Nev. (UPI) — Beverly Harrell, the first working madame to ever seek office in Nevada, was nominated Tuesday as a Democratic candidate for the state assembly.

Mrs. Harrell, the 4-foot-9 madame of the "Cottontail Ranch", moved into a healthy lead. Her closest opponents were Don Moody, a service station owner, and Frances Hawkins, a schoolteacher.

WASHINGTON — The Lithuanian sailor dragged from a U.S. Coast Guard cutter after an attempt to flee to the United States in 1970 has been reunited with his family and wants to bring them to the United States, a U.S. group said Tuesday.

Simas Kudirka was released Aug. 23 from a Soviet prison after he served four years of a 10-year sentence for treason, a spokesman for the Seasmen's Education Federation said. Kudirka was convicted of treason after he attempted to escape from a Soviet fishing trawler moored off Massachusetts.

He was declared a U.S. citizen by the state department July 17. His mother, born in New York, lives in Lithuania and was declared an American citizen May 17.

LOS ANGELES — Larry Bradford, 29, an alleged hired gun for a Mafia leader, was thought to have escaped from county jail sometime Sunday morning a large manhunt was organized Monday to find him. It turned out, however, that Bradford had been hiding someplace in the jail all the time. At lunch time Monday, Bradford became hungry, and tried to slip unnoticed into the mess hall from his hiding place. But a guard recognized him.

Soviets Hint At Space Problems

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press today broadly implied the two-day Soyuz-15 manned space flight ran into unforeseen difficulties and was forced to make an unprecedented landing in rain and low visibility in central Asia.

Reports on the Friday return of cosmonauts Gennady Sarafanov, 32, and Lev Demin, 48, to the Soviet Space Training Centre noted the two were praised for their exceptional courage on the flight.

The space trip ended Wednesday night when the two cosmonauts were forced to land in the rain on the steppes of Kazakhstan in central Asia.

Western experts said the emergency landing may have been required because the Soyuz spacecraft was seriously damaged in repeated attempts to dock it with the orbiting Salyut-3 space station.

LESBIANS WIN TOTS' CUSTODY

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Two women who live together as lesbians have won a second court battle for custody of their six children.

Judge Norman Ackley ruled Tuesday that Madeleine Isaacson and Sandra Schuster can retain custody of their children by previous marriages and should not be bound any longer by an earlier court ruling they would have to live "separate and apart" from each other.

Public Announcement

Ottawa, August 21, 1974

BROADCAST ADVERTISING TO CHILDREN AND CHILDREN'S PROGRAMMING

On October 16, 1973, the Commission announced its policy with respect to broadcast advertising to children and children's programming.

The Commission indicated, in its public announcement of that date, that all broadcasters would be required to provide the Commission with specific individual commitments that they would act in accordance with the provisions of the Broadcast Code for Advertising to Children, developed by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

The Commission intended that the Code should have virtually the strength of a CRTC regulation, "while maintaining the flexibility and responsiveness of an industry code."

Since that announcement the Commission has undertaken extensive monitoring of television stations in Canada for those periods of television broadcasting related to the viewing habits of children. Members of the Consumers' Association of Canada have also undertaken extensive monitoring across the country.

Concern expressed to the Commission has indicated that even though the self-regulatory procedures of the Code have proven effective, further assurances were required to ensure adherence to the Code by legally enforceable procedures.

The House of Commons Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, in its report on children's advertising, indicated that regardless of how excellent the procedures of self-regulation through the Broadcast Code might be, a stronger enforcement system would be desirable.

The Commission, in conformity with its previous undertaking to ensure the effectiveness of the Code and to meet the expressed concerns, hereby gives notice:

1. to all holders of licences to carry on broadcasting transmitting undertakings in Canada and all applicants for such licences, that adherence to the provisions of the Broadcast Code on Children's Advertising will be made a specific condition of each licence; and,
2. that a representative of the CRTC will formally represent the Commission at all deliberations of the Children's Advertising Sections of the Advertising Standards Council/Conseil des Normes de la Publicite which have the responsibility for pre-clearing all children's commercials.

The Commission has noted that discussions between the Canadian Association of Broadcasters and the Consumers' Association of Canada and other parties have resulted in a further amendment to the Code which was announced July 22, 1974.

This new amendment will limit the amount of time in a television commercial that may be used to describe a premium offered with the purchase of the product to be advertised. At the same time it was announced that a simplified presentation of the provisions of the Code would be prepared for distribution.

The Commission is confident that these new developments and procedures will further assist the effective implementation of the Code.

At the same time the Commission continues to assist in the organization of activities to study improvements in the Canadian standards of children's programs. The Commission has been encouraged by the formation of the Children's Broadcast Institute. The objective of the Institute is to improve the quality of television programs for children's viewing. It has brought together broadcasters, advertisers and public bodies in a concentrated effort to achieve its major objective. The Commission will support this important activity.

Director-General of Licensing

Boss Loses $500 in Bet —Wishes It Was More

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jim Miller lost a bet and $500 but he wishes he had lost even more.

Miller, president of a suburban Spring Grove manufacturing firm, told his cigarette-smoking employees he would give $50 to any one of them who swore off cigarettes for a year.

Ten did and Miller is out $500.

"I'm delighted. I'm a converted nonsmoker myself and there is nothing worse than converts," he said with a chuckle. "I knew everybody means to give up smoking. It created an incentive."

Miller gave up his two-pack-a-day habit 20 years ago. He remembered quite well how difficult it was. When he found out last year 250 of the 700 employees at Intermatic Inc. smoked, he decided to do something.

"I bet everyone $50 they couldn't stop smoking.

An "I quit smoking club" was formed. Thirty-six men and women joined and their names were published in the firm's newsletter for the entire year. Those who failed to kick the habit got a line drawn through their name.

The club membership thinned out to 12 almost a year later. On the day of reckoning, two persons admitted they sneaked two or three cigarettes during the year.

"It was a fun thing to do. We don't want to interfere with anyone's lifestyle," Miller said. "It added a little spice and challenge."

He said he told the 10 new nonsmokers that, according to the American Cancer Society, they had added nine years to their lives.

"We created a 90-year-old person," he said.

'Contract' on Policeman

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Radio Station CKNW said Tuesday Sergeant Bernie Smith of the Vancouver Police Department has lived through the summer under the threat of death.

The station said Sgt. Smith learned about July 1 that the underworld had offered a $10,000 contract on his life.

A full police investigation determined that the threat was sincere, the station quotes Sgt. Smith as saying.

The sergeant, a 28-year veteran of the force, has been in charge of a police detail in Vancouver's skid road district and has been active in getting rid of organized crime in the area, the station said.

Sgt. Smith said he has not had a bodyguard but that the RCMP has had his Burnaby home under constant surveillance.

BIKERS' PARENTS ACT

Sidney parents aren't apathetic after all.

Last week they responded overwhelmingly after Sidney RCMP said no one was attending bicycle safety programs police had organized at the urging of citizens.

A police spokesman said 33 youngsters enrolled in the three-day course offered Aug. 28 to 30 as a last-ditch attempt to educate young bicyclists in the ways of safer riding.

Earlier in the month, police had arranged three sessions but had to cancel all but one when only eight children enrolled and seven showed up.

"We appreciate the efforts of parents to get their kids out," the spokesman said. "It was very well received."

Only a week ago Sgt. Alan Tomlins, head of the Sidney detachment, said he was irked by "public apathy" and called the people's concern for the training course "a lot of hogwash."

Maybe the bad publicity helped," the spokesman said.

DR. BEST MARRIED 50 YEARS

Dr. Best was born in 1899 in West Pembroke, Me., of Canadian parents. His ancestors arrived in Halifax in 1749 with Governor Cornwallis for the founding of that city.

Mrs. Best, the former Margaret Mahon, was born in St. Andrews, N.B. They were married in Toronto.

Dr. Best and Sir Frederick Banting discovered insulin, used universally in the treatment of diabetes, in 1921.

King Looks After 3,000-Member Family

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A United States freighter loaded with 120 prefabricated townhouses and enough plastic, chrome and glass furnishings to fill them is on its way to Tiaf, Saudi Arabia.

King Faisal ordered the living quarters and their furnishings for some of his 3,000-member family. Others will go for nurses quarters at the King Faisal Specialist Hospital.

Next month, in the shadow of the king's palace, crews of U.S. workmen will assemble the rows of Kingsberry homes made by the Boise Cascade Corp.

The townhouses will have wall-to-wall shag carpets, central air conditioning and built-in intercoms and AM/FM radio systems.

U.S. work crews are expected to complete the construction task in 12 months.

The Saudi royal family is so large because Faisal's father, the legendary King Ibn Saud, had 40 sons, and each of them, being Moslem, was entitled to four wives. Faisal himself is reported to have had three wives but to have lived with only one at a time.

French Families March for School

WINNIPEG (CP) — The six-month-old confrontation between St. Boniface School Board and the parents of about 60 pupils over the closing of the French-language Tache Elementary School intensified Tuesday.

Board chairman Lloyd Davis said Tache School will not be re-opened despite a demonstration by about 150 pupils and 50 parents outside the school board office Tuesday.

The demonstrators marched once around the office, and picketing at the office continued all day. The parents had planned to occupy the school but were prevented from doing so by security guards.

The parents have vowed to keep their children out of school until Tache is re-opened.

They have refused to send their children to nearby Provencher School because they maintain that program A, a curriculum taught primarily in the French language, will not thrive in a school which also offers a half-French, half-English program.

Davis said trustees still believe they made a good decision when they decided to close Tache because of declining enrolment and rising costs. He said the decision has received "a lot of support in the division as a whole."

Alta. Opens Centre To Hold Prisoners

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta's first prisoner remand centre opened here Tuesday, and Solicitor-general Helen Hunley said she hopes the transfer of prisoners awaiting court appearances can begin soon.

She added that she hopes prisoners can be moved from the Spy Hill jail to the remand centre "without losing any of them," a remark aimed at the seven escapes at the minimum-security prison in the last three weeks.

The new remand centre, which took seven years to bring from the planning stage through government deliberations and finally construction, will house 150 prisoners.

Women will not be housed in the new centre. Miss Hunley said women prisoners will be held in city police cells if waiting for a short period of time. They will be imprisoned at the Fort Saskatchewan reformatory for women near Edmonton.

Ellen Kremrien, president of the Alberta Elizabeth Fry Society, said the province's decision not to allow women prisoners in the remand centre is "indefensible."

She said facilities for women in the city jail are inadequate. The remand centre plan was "short-sighted," and women prisoners will have to accept "second-best accommodation."

Weather Slows Crop Harvest

CALGARY (CP) — Cool, cloudy and showery weather again delayed ripening and harvesting of Alberta's crops last week, the Alberta Wheat Pool reported Tuesday.

Although below-freezing temperatures were reported in the Edmonton, Vermilion and Red Deer areas, crops are near maturity and damage is not expected to be severe, the pool said.

The crops were "fairly mature" now and would not be affected as severely by frost as they would have been several weeks ago.

Swathing was general throughout southern and south-central Alberta, while the rest of the province will not see swathing in full until the weekend, the pool said.

POT CASE BAIL $35,000

EDMONTON (CP) — Three men, charged after police seized almost 300 pounds of marijuana, were granted a total of $35,000 in cash and property bail when they appeared in court Tuesday.

Provincial Judge Carl Rolf granted Ronald Van Slyke, 24, of Spokane, cash bail of $15,000 while Michael Meyer, 32, and William Grant Nolan, 30, both of Edmonton, were each granted $10,000 property bail with one or more sureties.

The three men were remanded to next Tuesday for election and plea on a joint charge of conspiring to commit an indictable offence and one joint charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. Nolan and Meyer also face a joint charge of illegal cultivation of marijuana while Van Slyke faces a separate charge of importing marijuana.

Charges were laid last week after city police detectives and RCMP seized about 300 pounds of marijuana and dried marijuana plants as well as an unharvested crop of 750 plants near Redwater, about 35 miles northeast of Edmonton.

SURPLUS REPORTED

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government had a surplus of $529 million during the first four months of the current fiscal year, the finance department reported Tuesday.

Budgetary revenues during the April-July period were $7.963 billion and expenditures $7.434 billion.

During the same period of the 1973-74 fiscal year revenues were $6.085 billion and expenditures $6.040 billion.

For July, revenues were $2.205 billion this year and $1.695 billion last year and expenditures were $1.873 billion this year and $1.459 billion last year.

Gov't Workers Slow Down

EDMONTON (CP) — Clerical workers employed by the government are becoming "very disgruntled because of government hiring practice" and in at least one city employees are promoting a work-to-rule approach, a Civil Service Association of Alberta (CSA) official said Tuesday.

Association president Bill Broad said a number of employees in Calgary booked off sick for two days and now are trying to persuade others to join them in a slowdown by working to rule.

Broad said government wages for clerical employees are falling behind the cost of living. The CSA has repeatedly tried to re-open collective agreements, but the government refuses to do so, he added.

Jury Criticizes Timing Of Court Notification

BURNABY (CP) — Both sides should be notified at the same time about family court hearings, a coroner's jury here recommended Tuesday in finding deaths of a Burnaby couple were murder-suicide.

The jury found that Helene Marie Buckley, 59, was murdered by her husband James Buckley, 69, who then committed suicide. The two were found dead in their burning home Aug. 10.

Burnaby coroner Dr. Guy Richmond said evidence showed the wife was living with relatives and was afraid of her husband's reaction when he got a summons to appear at a hearing on her application for a separation.

She would have been more wary about returning to the house if she had known her husband had received the subpoena, the coroner said.

Mrs. Buckley was found tied up in the basement, with her husband on the carpet nearby, dead from smoke inhalation. The jury found that Buckley had started the fire.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Red Cross Society said Tuesday that the blood bank had less than one day's supply and, unless supply increases dramatically in the next few days, operations would have to be cancelled in Vancouver hospitals this week. A similar problem last week forced the partial curtailment of supplies to hospitals.

QUESNEL (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Tuesday that a Kamloops family of four killed Aug. 2 north of here died accidentally. No blame was attached.

Donald Lyle Devauld, 32, his wife, Arlene, 26, and their two children died when their vehicle collided with an oncoming truck after swerving to avoid an aluminum boat that had fallen from a passing pickup truck.

The jury recommended more attention be given to regulations controlling the transportation of boats by motor vehicles

VANCOUVER (CP) — A first contract with the 1,300 members of Local 1 of the Association of University and College Employees was approved Tuesday by the board of governors of the University of British Columbia.

The contract provides for across-the-board increases of $50 a month retroactive to April 1, $100 a month retroactive to July 1, and $75 a month retroactive to April 1, 1975.

The work week for the members, who are employed as office and non-professional library workers, will be reduced to 35 hours from 36¼ hours.

'Not What They Used To Be'

BELLEVUE, Mich. (UPI) — Ballplayers and politicians aren't what they used to be, says 104-year-old Dan Olmstead, who spends his time brushing up on his dancing.

"With more than a hundred grandchildren, I have to keep up on my dancing so I can dance at their weddings," he said.

Olmstead has little to say about politics, though he says he hopes he's around for the next presidential election.

He said he generally votes for the man, not the party, although he leans toward the republicans.

However, he said, "ballplayers and politicians aren't what they used to be."

Acupuncture By Referral

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city's first officially-sanctioned acupuncture clinic will be accepting patients on a referral basis only, a spokesman for the Vancouver General Hospital said Tuesday.

Dr. L. C. Jenkins, head of the VGH acupuncture committee, said patients will need to be referred to the clinic by their own doctors, and that details of medical history, physical examinations and lab results would have to be forwarded as well.

The clinic, which is scheduled to commence this fall, will be staffed by at least two physicians at all times, as well as a number of approved acupuncture practitioners, said Dr. Jenkins.

He said the acupuncture techniques would be used only to kill pain, and not for other forms of treatment.

The treatments will be done by salaried acupuncture technicians who will be screened according to their training in acupuncture and their knowledge of asepsis, anatomy, physiology, physics and pain management, Dr. Jenkins said.

Tuna Lead Extended

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — The British Caribbean team tightened its hold on the lead in the international tuna competition today when it took its second tuna of the tournament.

Bill Lawrence of Bermuda fought the 900-pound bluefin for an hour and 45 minutes before bringing it to gaff.

The British Caribbean team jumped into the lead Tuesday, the first day of the tournament, when Tom Smith of Bermuda reeled in a 745-pound fish.

Coach Never Big on Ealey

HAMILTON (CP) — It was never in the books that Chuck Ealey should be Jerry Williams' quarterback.

Perhaps their brightest moment together was a sunny, cool afternoon in December, 1972, when Ealey led Williams' Hamilton Tiger-Cats to the Canadian Football League championship.

But the Hamilton coach never was enthused about a running quarterback which Ealey did a lot of that year and during his undefeated years at the University of Toledo.

The Ticats have fallen on dark days and Monday night shipped Ealey to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in exchange for aging quarterback Don Jonas.

"In 1972 we were able to accentuate his strong points," Williams said Tuesday. "But subsequent defences adjusted to his style."

Williams didn't say outright, but it was obvious the Tiger-Cats are blaming Ealey's 1973 performance for them missing the playoffs for the first time in 14 years.

Jonas, 35 and 11 years Ealey's senior, is Williams' type of quarterback a passer who has learned from experience the dangers of rolling out of a protective pocket.

Williams said that despite published reports, there was nothing personal in the decision to trade Ealey.

"We tried to adopt our offence to fit his abilities," Williams said, "and at the same time maintain a certain amount of drop-back phylosophy which at certain times he did well.

"It's just that Jonas gives us the drop-back pattern that we want."

Nor did Williams feel that the ages of the two players gave either team an advantage, even though Jonas has said this year will be his last as a player.

The trade, however, caught the two principals off guard.

"I really can't see the justification for such a trade," said a bitter Ealey, adding: "I haven't been officially informed by the club . . . it's only rumor."

Jonas "really couldn't believe it" when told and hinted he wanted to stay in Winnipeg, "to finish my career here and have my roots here."

"I don't even know the reason why. That's the thing that shocks me also."

He said, however, he probably would report to Hamilton "or at least go and talk to them and just see how things work out."

Tips On Buying Vegetables

For the economy-minded who wish to provide nourishing yet satisfying meals for their family, Food Advisory Services, Agricuulture Canadda has some advice on buying fresh vegetables.

Buy fresh vegetables in season when their price is lowest. Handle them as little as possible so as not to damage them.

Vegetables sold at a reduced price may be a good buy if you can use them immediately but there may be considerable waste if they are overmature and wilted.

Use a vegetable peeler to avoid wasting any vegetable or loss of the nutrients which are found under the skin or peel.

Young Winger Gets Long Pact

Sturgeon had 39 goals and 48 assists in 70 games last season with Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Constable 'In Contempt'

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP Constable Robert Samson was declared in contempt of court today after refusing to testify at a fire commission inquiry into a July 26 bomb explosion.

Constable Samson said he could not testify because of memory lapses and physical fatigue caused by injuries he suffered in the explosion at the fashionable suburban house of Steinbergs Ltd., president, Melvyn Doorin.

The constable said the explosion left him with a 45-percent hearing impairment for which he is scheduled to undergo surgery this weekend.

Commissioner Delage ruled these reasons insufficient in light of inquiry testimony last week which revealed Constable Samson said he felt physically fit to testify. He set sentencing for later today.

New Aide for Stanfield

OTTAWA (CP) — Ronald S. Ritchie, former vice-president of Imperial Oil Ltd. and a Conservative candidate in the July 8 general election, has been appointed principal assistant to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

He replaces E. Finlay MacDonald who is returning to private business.

Ritchie, who was unsuccessful in the Algoma riding in the general election, headed a special study on public policy for Prime Minister Trudeau in 1968.

Cyprus: Flashpoint Since Before Christ

BIG POWERS KEEP EYE ON ISLAND

The United States and Russia have long been watchful of moves by other side to dominate the area

The sun-splashed isle has been a bone of contention since before Christ's time

By The Associated Press

Cyprus, Mediterannean flashpoint, has been a bone of contention since before the time of Christ.

Any upheaval on the sun-splashed isle, whose 650,000 inhabitants are about 80 per cent ethnic Greek and 17 per cent ethnic Turkish, causes immediate concern in both Washington and Moscow each whom fear a move by the other side to dominate the eastern Mediterannean and thus gain the upper hand in the Middle East.

Cyprus, situated only 40 miles from Turkey, 500 miles from Greece and 100 miles from Lebanon traces its origin back to 1500 B.C. when Greek colonies were set up on the island. The Phoenicians moved in about 800 B.C. and the island subsequently fell under Assyrian, Egyptian and Persian rule. In 58 B.C., it was annexed by Rome, then Richard the Lion Hearted of England conquered it in 1191 during the Crusades. For three centuries after that, Cyprus was ruled as a feudal kingdom, then Venice annexed it in 1489.

The Turks took over in 1571, marking the beginning of the Turkish minority on the island. Today in fact, the Greek Cypriots claim that the Turkish Cypriots are merely a remnant of the Ottoman Empire conquerors of 400 years ago.

Under British rule the movement among the Greek population for Union with Greece (ENOSIS) became a source of constant tension. Violence flared in part by Turkish support for Turkish Cypriot demands for partition.

In 1953, the Greek Cypriots elected Archbishop Makarios, politically astute Greek Orthodox Church prelate, as their national leader, and he became a symbol for the desire for ENOSIS.

After waves of violence, Britain, Greece and Turkey signed an agreement making Cyprus independent but guaranteed the Turkish minority's rights.

No End to Epidemic

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Sao Paulo has entered the third month of a meningitis epidemic with substantial increases in hospital cases and a fluctuating daily death count of seven to 14. State health department figures released Tuesday gave the total number in hospitals with meningitis as 2,013.

CHURCH FIRES PRIEST FOR BAPTIZING TOT

BOSTON (AP) — The Globe says a Jesuit priest from New York who performed a baptism in nearby Marlboro two weeks ago when local priests refused on the grounds the mother approved of abortion has been dismissed from the order.

Quoting a Jesuit familiar with the case, The Globe says the dismissal of Rev. Joseph O'Rourke has not been made public because confirmation of the action has not been received from Pedro Arrupe, superior general of the Society of Jesus in Rome.

A young man who broke two windows in a school received a $50 fine.

Michael Patrick Walsh, 18, of no fixed address, was also ordered to pay the Greater Victoria School Board $47.50 restitution.

Ostler told Walsh he must have some idea of the "staggering load" which the education system already is on the public and added that damage "adds to the burden unnecessarily.

"The cost is becoming prohibitive and its got to stop."

Walsh said, "I just don't know why I did it."

Richard Miller, 19, of no fixed address, will be sentenced Sept. 24 for breaking into Saunders and Hitchman, 2040 Cadboro Bay, on Aug. 23 and stealing a bag containing $99.20.

Miller had been a janitor with the firm.

Richard Brent Meeres, 21, of 254½ Old Island Highway, was given suspended sentences and placed on two years' probation after pleading guilty to two break-ins and possessing stolen property.

Meeres broke into the offices of two doctors May 10 and took a vial containing an artificial drug from one, and scattered drugs about the other.

Stuart Triplett, 18, of 548 Johnson, pleaded guilty to breaking into a downtown hotel Aug. 26 and committing theft.

Macdonald said Triplett, along with two other persons, entered the hotel by an unlocked window and got $65 from a cigarette machine.

Triplett will be sentenced Sept. 20.

A two-year less a day jail term was imposed on a Victoria man in provincial court Tuesday after he was found guilty of possessing heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Police discovered 29 capsules of heroin buried in the field.

The other man, Keith Mullally, earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing heroin and received a one-year sentence.

A witness testified Cunningham told him after the incident, "if he was doing the thing by himself he would never have got busted."

The witness told the court Cunningham said he "wanted to get back into business," and asked him if he wanted to sell heroin for $7 a capsule.

Judge William Ostler recommended Daniel Makow, 4075 Metchosin, serve the sentence in a forestry camp.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said Makow, who pleaded guilty, asked for a set of car keys from a watchman at Metro-Toyota, 625 Frances, on Aug. 24. The watchman refused.

Macdonald said the watchman later saw Makow push the buggy on Frances 250 feet away from the parking lot.

Defence lawyer Brian McAsey said Makow took the buggy because he had a grudge against the company.

"He didn't really have the intention to steal for monetary purposes," McAsey said.

Leonard Baronette, 34, of no fixed address, will be sentenced Sept. 20 for break, entry and theft, and for two shoplifting offences.

Baronette pleaded guilty.

Two persons jointly charged with possession of MDA for the purpose of trafficking elected to be tried by judge and jury.

Edward Dye, 28, of 706 Pine, and Betty Huget, 32, of the same address were charged after 101 capsules were found in their apartment Aug. 25.

Preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 3.

Dye will also be tried at that time for possessing both marijuana and cannabis resin, and Huget will be tried for possessing marijuana.

In other drug cases, a youth on probation at the Metchosin Camp was given a suspended sentence and six more months' probation for possessing marijuana.

Jean Baptiste Gaudreault, 17, of no fixed address, was searched by a camp official Sunday and a small amount of marijuana was found in his pocket.

MADDOX
. . . old line

ATLANTA — Georgia voters rejected Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox's bid for a second term as governor Tuesday, apparently ending after eight years the political career of one of the last of the South's old line segregationists.

Gov. Jimmy Carter, who for four years feuded with Maddox, wired Busbee his "congratulations on your tremendous victory" and said voters had "endorsed in you our hopes and dreams for a better Georgia."

Maddox refused to concede the election, but told his supporters at 10 p.m. that his "prayers have never been that I win the election, but that God use me.

"Regardless of how it comes out, I feel like it will be his will and I'll do whatever I can for the people of Georgia and the United States of America," he said.

Maddox said the campaign had been "the ugliest thing I have ever been involved in my life. They've hurt my wife and hurt my children and I can't support anyone that hasn't been fair with people."

In other runoff voting, Macon Mayor Ronnie Thampson was trailing Atlanta businessman Harold Dye for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and former Jesup Mayor Mary Hitt lost her bid for the Democratic Leutenant Governor nomination to former party executive secretary Zell Miller.

Maddox, who proclaimed the runoff race between him and Busbee as "the most important election in the country this year," said his campaign for a second term as governor would be his last political outing. He was governor from 1966 to 1970.

Later, supporters of Maddox — who has served as Lt. Governor in the four years since his term as governor ended — hinted they might undertake a general election write-in campaign if he were eliminated from the Democratic ticket in the primary. However, the margin of his defeat made such an effort appear unlikely.

LOSING CENTS

WASHINGTON — It costs about 24 cents a mile to own and operate a mid-size car, 19 cents for a sub-compact, and about 29 cents for a standard-size model.

These are averages reported by the leasing division of the Hertz Corp. in a study for its fleet customers.

The cents-per-mile averages assume the owner drives his car 10,000 miles a year, and keeps it three years. They include interest on the loan he took out to buy the car, as well as his other operating costs.

The per-mile averages work out to $2,400 a year for the owner of a mid-size car driven 10,000 miles. The totals would be $1,900 for a sub-compact and $2,900 for a standard-size car.

Daredevil Cleared

NEW YORK (AP) — High-wire artist Philippe Petit was cleared Tuesday of charges of disorderly conduct and criminal trespass for his daredevil Aug. 7 tightrope jaunt between the 1,353-foot-high twin towers of the World Trade Centre. He had been promised dismissal of the charges in return for his public performance last week on a 600-foot cable stretched 80 feet above Central Park's Belvedere Lake.

Watergate Accuser Dean Dons Prison Denims

By JOHN P. MACKENZIE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — John W. Dean III surrendered to the U.S. Marshal's office Tuesday to begin serving his prison sentence for his confessed role in the Watergate cover-up.

Dean, whose accusations against former President Nixon helped to break open the Watergate case, was then taken to an undisclosed nearby facility to remain available as a witness against six other former Nixtn aides at their Sept. 30 conspiracy trial.

The 35-year-old former presidential counsel was polite but unresponsive to newsmen at the U.S. Court House. He specifically declined to say whether he thought Nixon should also undergo prosecution or whether the latest tapes disclosures gave him a sense of vindication.

Asked what he planned to do after serving at least a year of his sentence of one to four years, Dean replied, "I don't know." He has been disbarred from law practice following his guilty plea last October.

Dean admitted numerous actions aimed at concealing the blame for the 1972 burglary of the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate. The acts included attempting to spirit burglar E. Howard Hunt out of the country, coaching witnesses to lie and sending a clemency offer to defendant James C. McCord to secure is silence.

In a bid for a lighter sentence, Dean also spught to emphasize his role in warning Nixon against a cover-up, his co-operation with prosecutors and the information he gave that led to the discovery of the incriminating White House tapes.

Dean arrived at the court house wearing conservative steel-gray suit, blue shirt and dark tie. The marshal's office said he would exchange this clothing for prison denims.

Forgery Ring Broken

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP officers Tuesday arrested four persons and confiscated a printing press believed to have been used to print thousands of counterfeit Canadian and United States bank notes in the last several years. An RCMP spokesman said one of the most active forgery rings in Canada had been broken. The names of those arrested were withheld until police complete their investigations. Several more arrests are expected, he said.

Cyanide Blamed in Death

TORONTO (CP) — Cyanide poisoning killed a boy undergoing plastic surgery at a Toronto hospital last June, a coroner's jury was told Tuesday.

Dr. Ronald Ryder, a pathologist, testified the cyanide was traced to sodium nitroprusside, a drug regarded as one of the safest means of reducing blood pressure.

DR. SPOCK

SPOCK SERIES SLATED

At a time when the whole concept of family life, social and political structures, the ideals we have long believed in, and disciplines of every sort are under severe attack—particularly by the younger generation—a 10-part series by the world's most eminent pediatrician and children's psychiatrist, Dr. Benjamin Spock, will appear in The Times Family Section starting next Saturday, Sept. 7.

Without resorting to rant or dogma and always advocating instinct over theory, encouraging the power and value of love and the sense of giving the Spock series shows how tested principles of human relationships still pertain in a new and changing world; how mutual respect between parent and child can be established and maintained, and how the nuclear family can remain as a central, steadying base in a time of shift and change.

Spock has been writing about children since 1946. Baby and Child Care, his first book, has sold 24 million copies and has been translated into 26 languages.

Rental Crisis Gripping City

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The shortage of apartment space in the Victoria area has reached what municipal leaders call "crisis proportions."

And it is getting more serious every day.

Vacancy Rate Almost Nil

"Construction of apartments for rent has virtually come to a halt in the Victoria area," says Chris Dowling, local manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The vacancy rate is almost nil.

"A few builders are still putting up condominiums but there is no interest at all in rental apartment construction," Dowling said.

"I would be surprised to see any more large rental projects under present conditions."

The conditions in part are due to federal taxation changes but mainly are centred on a concern about the provincial government's 8 per cent rent increase limit.

"Money has no particular social conscience," Mayor Peter Pollen said today. "It will go where it can get a return on its investment. The provincial government's policies are discouraging private construction."

The effect of the provincial government's attitude is reflected in the construction figures.

Apartment construction across Canada is down 15 per cent from last year due to a shortage of mortgage funds and the end of the federal tax benefits for investing in apartments.

Construction Starts Down

However, in Victoria apartment construction starts this year are down 41 per cent from 1973. Other B.C. cities report a similar trend.

"I have come to the conclusion that the 8 per cent limit must be removed," says Saanich Mayor Ed Lum.

"The only solution to the housing crisis is to lift the 8 per cent ceiling to allow developers a fair return. This would encourage apartment construction.

"There should be some ceiling, but with the rate of inflation running at 12 per cent or more, an 8 per cent ceiling is not reasonable."

The official count shows that you can expect to find only one vacancy in a 200-suite apartment building. And you have to move quickly.

These appeared in Tuesday's Times:

"Emergency! It's the street for us . . ."

"$50 reward to finder of house, duplex or suite . . ."

Many Renters Desperate

There were 15 ads by people desperately needing a house to rent and another 10 seeking an apartment. A year ago no one would think of advertising for an apartment. They didn't have to.

However, Tuesday there were only 15 ads offering unfurnished apartments to rent, down from 62 ads on the same day in 1973.

There were 10 ads offering furnished apartments, down from 34 a year ago.

The apartment shortage is even worse than it appears on the surface. While 1,046 apartment units were started in the Greater Victoria area this year, almost all of them were for condominiums, not for rent.

However, the total includes a 38-unit condominium in Esquimalt and a 30-unit condominium in Victoria.

Contributing to the apartment shortage is the conversion rate to condominiums. Apartments can be constructed for sale as condominiums, but special permission must be granted by the municipality before an existing rental apartment can be converted to a condominium.

In that connection, Mayor Lum has bad news for apartment owners.

Tough Stand in Saanich

"While the present crisis continues, Saanich will take a very tough stand with owners trying to convert rental units to strata title (condominiums). The shortage is bad enough as it is."

He said Saanich city hall is receiving a large number of calls from people seeking rental accommodations and he has to tell them there is virtually nothing available.

The shortage is most acute at the University of Victoria where there are only 600 beds in dormitories and a student waiting list of 500.

"We stopped taking applications in May and there are a lot more than 500 students looking for accommodation," says Shirley Baker, co-ordinator of student housing.

About 300 rooms have been located in houses in the area but some students are going to have to travel across town, some from as far away as Colwood.

"The response from the public has been gratifying but we still need more rooms," she said.

Mayor Pollen places the

MUSK OX FOR MOSCOW

MONTREAL (CP) — Ten musk oxen from the Canadian Arctic are to be flown to the Soviet Union today, the first step of a Soviet attempt to reintroduce the species in Siberia.

The six female and four male oxen will be set free on Siberia's Taymyr peninsula. Musk oxen have been extinct in the Soviet Union for 2,000 years.

It is expected the oxen will survive in Siberia, becoming a source of meat and wool for the natives of the peninsula. About 10,000 oxen live under similar conditions on the Canadian Arctic islands off Ellesmere, Melville and Banks.

Munro Handling Grain?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro today made a "public plea for rationality" among employers and 550 grain handlers in a deadlocked labor dispute that has blocked the flow of grain from this west coast port since Aug. 26.

The minister told a news conference he will continue to meet with parties that have a direct interest in the dispute before returning to Ottawa today but he would not identify who he will be talking with.

He also reiterated the federal government's stand that parliament will not be called into session before the scheduled Sept. 30 to legislate an end to the dispute.

"I'm not issuing a plea on one hand and a threat on the other," said the minister who was accompanied on his trip here by his deputy Tom Eberlee.

Mr. Munro called on the Grain Workers Union and the five elevator companies to take a more rational, dispassionate look at the report prepared by conciliator Dr. Neil Perry.

If the dispute drags on until Parliament opens, the outcome is a foregone conclusion because the government has committed itself to the recommendations of the Perry report.

The minister said that if the grain companies intend to procrastinate and wait for Parliament to implement the conditions of the Perry report to embarrass the Liberals, "the government is prepared to be embarrassed."

Asked if the government has plans to take over grain handling, Mr. Munro said that possibility has been looked at but not endorsed.

Metro Stays Closed

MONTREAL (CP) — Traffic on city streets was slow again today following the return to classes of 230,000 public school students in the absence of subway service.

About 1,375 of the city's 1,900 buses were on the roads because of the 29-day walkout by maintenance workers, a transit commission spokesman said, adding that there will definitely be no subway service until the 1,600 workers return to work.

A police spokesman said there was no more road accidents than usual because of the strike although traffic, especially in the city's east end, was bad.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUCTC) said more than 10,000 public school students were without bus transportation because the commission faces a shortage of buses and cannot spare enough for them.

Meanwhile, a provincial labor department spokesman said Tuesday the Quebec government has no immediate plans to pass legislation to end the strike.

The strikers already have defied a Quebec Superior Court injunction ordering them back to work. The union and some of its members were fined $54,050 for contempt of court for disobeying the Aug. 8 injunction.

The spokesman said commission lawyers will seek additional contempt of court charges against 23 union members previously fined.

The commission has refused the union's request to reopen negotiations on a wage contract which does not expire until July 1975. The men currently earn between $3.50 and $5.50.

The almost month-long strike has sent an estimated 500,000 peopple who use the subway daily scurrying to find alternate means of transportation. About one million people use the transit system daily.

Several workers have grown beards during the 23-day layoff and plan to return to the job with them. But the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) frowns on beards.

Most of the 5,700 members of Division 13, Amalgamated Transit Union, took part in secret balloting Tuesday. Of the 4,838 members who voted, 78 per cent were in favor of returning to work.

Commission officials reported that full service resumed by 6 a.m. today, although subway trains might be less frequent than normal during peak hours. Allnight bus, tram and trolley routes started at midnight Tuesday night.

For four days, the workers had defied a law passed in the Ontario legislature ordering them back to work. Whether the TTC will seek permission from the Ontario Labor Relations Board to prosecute the workers individually or the union as a whole was still unanswered Tuesday night.

'Fun Gun' Upsets Police

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The salesman calls it a "fun gun" but Vancouver police are suspicious of the customers to whose sense of humor it may appeal.

However, because it only fires them one at a time the gun is officially in the same class as semi-automatic hunting rifles and sales of the $195 gun are legal.

With the price of ammunition for the gun at $15 for 50 rounds, however, this would be an expensive pastime.

The .45 calibre gun has two hand grips, an ammunition clip with 30 rounds and is 37 inches long. It is made in Knoxville, Tennessee, by Commando Arms Inc. which claims to have sold 16,000 of the guns in the past four years.

The Vancouver police official said the Commando Mark III is the same gun converted by Symbionese Liberation Army into an automatic weapon, a claim denied by the manufacturer of the gun.

The gun is being sold as a hunting rifle the police official said. "But I can't see what use it could be to any hunter."

Turkey Vows Reprisals For Cyprus Massacres

Times News Services

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — More bodies were dug up today from a grave at the Turkish-Cypriot village of Maratha, and the Turks reported two more massacres in which they said 158 Turkish-Cypriots may have died.

Officers of the United Nations peace force counting skulls removed from a garbage pit outside Maratha said 84 men, women and children had been buried in the grave. Survivors in the village 12 miles northwest of Famagusta said the victims were Turkish-Cypriots slain by Greek-Cypriot gunmen.

The Greek-Cypriot government of President Glafkos Clerides contended that the corpses might be those of Greek-Cypriots missing in the district. A Nicosia newspaper said a medallion found on one of the bodies belonged to a Greek-Cypriot woman who lived six miles from Maratha and was missing with her seven-year-old son.

A Greek Cypriot spokesman charged the Turks with a "desperate effort to divert the attention of world opinion from the suffering and evils brought about by their invasion of Cyprus."

The spokesman said, however, the greek Cypriots are "willing to provide any facility to the United Nations for an on-the-spot investigation, in the presence of representatives from both sides."

Turkish-Cypriot defence minister, Osman Orek, told reporters he has been informed of two more alleged massacres.

He said 96 Turkish-Cypriots were missing from villages near the south coast and were believed buried in Palodhia, but Greek-Cypriot police there refused to let UN investigators search for the grave.

Orek also said that he has information that 62 Turkish-Cypriot civilians from Timi, west of Limassol, have been killed and buried in that area.

The Clerides government has called for an independent investigation by the UN force and the International Red Cross of all atrocity reports, and vice-President Raul Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community, said he would welcome the inquiry. But nothing has been done about getting it started.

JURY BLAMES DEAD TEEN

Driver 'Bugged Into' Death Drag Race

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A 20-year-old Saapich man said Tuesday he was "bugged into" a high speed drag race on the Pat Bay Highway in which three young people were killed Aug. 10.

"I did it to get away from them," Brian Allen Murphy, 3220 Quadra, told a coroner's jury inquiring into the deaths of Paul Young, 17, of Lower Kippens, Nfld., Dana Lucian Tower, 17, of 1412 Taunton, and Janice Moyes, 16, of 121 Kamloops.

Murphy said the youths had followed him as he drove north on the highway shortly after 3:30 a.m. enciting him to drag by changing from one lane to another, gunning the motor and flashing headlights.

He said when he turned around at Elk Lake to come back home the car sped up alongside him.

"I became really annoyed, so I stepped on the gas," he said.

The two cars, reaching speeds Murphy estimated at 90 mph, raced neck and neck until just before the Royal Oak overpass when he slowed down and then watched the death car veer out of control into a rock wall.

The two woman, four man jury determined Paul Young, the presumed driver of the car, was criminally negligent in the operation of the vehicle.

They cited dangerous driving on the part of Murphy but added the race was "a result of harassment by the driver of the Olds (the death car) and its occupants."

The jury deliberated one hour before delivering findings to Coroner Edmond St. Jorre at five minutes past midnight. It followed a four hour hearing which centered mainly on Murphy's testimony.

The inquest was into its third day after having been adjourned Aug. 26.

Murphy said he first saw the trio driving in a 1967 Oldsmobile in the Town and Country parking lot.

"They were squealing tires and making asses of themselves," he said.

He left the lot when he heard a number of cars had collected for drag races on the highway near Vanalman and went to watch.

However, the rumor proved false so he decided "to take a run out the highway".

"That's when the Olds pulled up beside me. The driver started to jump his car — putting his foot on the gas pedal to make it jump — and challenge me to a drag."

He sped away from the car twice, he said, then did a U-turn in the road at Elk Lake.

"The Olds passed me doing about a 100 mph, went through an amber flashing light, and out of sight. I headed back home."

He had not gone far when the Olds was along side him again.

"I heard screaming. I didn't know what was going on. The driver kept bouncing the front end of his car."

He said he "tried to get away, but the Olds kept up with him.

On the downward sweep to the Royal Oak overpass he said he slowed, fearing a radar trap on the other side of the bridge.

He estimated he was 300 yards behind the Olds when it crashed.

"I don't know whether the driver was trying to switch lanes or what. When the car hit there were pieces flying everywhere."

His testimony varied from that of Darlene Evelyn Anderson, the driver of a car the two had passed on the highway.

She said the cars raced past her when she was opposite the Royal Oak Inn and saw both disappear together around the corner under the overpass.

Tank Farm Move Rejected

The provincial government has apparently turned down Victoria's suggestion, that the unsightly tank farm on the Songhees industrial reserve be relocated to the west side of Esquimalt Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

Pollen said he has received a letter from a deputy minister—whom he wouldn't identify—indicating that the DND property eyed as an alternative site for the tank installations is too ecologically important to be used for that purpose.

The official stated that the property in question was a treed area required for the expansion of Fort Rodd Hill Park, and also considered important in terms of waterfowl and marine life conservation.

Pollen said the only solution offered by the letter was the suggestion that the best possible site for oil storage tanks was in an area where natural values had long since been destroyed—in other words "leave them where they are and perhaps landscape them a little."

With heavy sarcasm, the mayor added: "This is a really aggressive well-informed, very biased, very senior civil servant who has taken it upon himself to enunciate policy and tell us what we should be discussing."

And that was the only provincial response so far to the city's request for the government to press federal authorities for the use of the DND property, he added.

Two Hurt But Fire Halted On Mt. Finlayson

Rocks and other debris tumbling down precipitous Mount Finlayson put two firefighters in hospital Tuesday but the fire burning over the rugged western slope has been "contained."

The hottest part of the two-day blaze was at the base of the mountain beside Goldstream Park this morning but Ranger Marsh Antonelli said bush surrounding it has been smeared with "red mud" fire retardant.

With a little luck the 60-acre fire will be at the mop-up stage by tonight, he said.

★

From the outset Monday afternoon, firefighters have had to contend with boulders and burning snags rolling down on them from the western slope, which in places is too steep to climb.

Also in good condition at Victoria General Hospital is Len Floker, 44, of Colwood, who received a broken hand and cuts to his neck when hit by "tumbling debris."

The fire, which came within about a quarter-mile of a handful of houses on Finlayson Arm Road Tuesday, was stopped at that point.

Antonelli said a fire guard has been bulldozed across the top of Mount Finlayson.

The A 26 water bombers were dropping their 800-gallon loads on a hot spot high on the mountain slope at the northern rim of the fire today.

A 60-man crew is fighting the blaze. It got some help from sporadic showers and cooler temperatures. For the second day there was little wind in the fire area.

It was on Skirt Mountain seven years ago that the two-man crew of a Canso water bomber was killed when the plane clipped the tip of a tree and crashed.

The fire started Monday afternoon beside a hiking trail to the popular summit lookout. Firefighters speculate it was started by a careless smoker.

Pollen, Bawlf Roast Second Gov't Freeze

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The provincial government's second development "freeze" in downtown Victoria—this time on the demolition of the B.C. Land Building in the 900-block Government Street—drew an angry response today from city officials.

Mayor Peter Pollen denounced the move as another example of "growing government be decreee, in response to really irrational demands by, politicians such as Gorst Esquimalt NDP MLA Jim Gorst) who are making hay out of heritage."

Ald. Sam Bawlf, city council's arch-preservationist of old buildings, condemned the government for taking a "back-door approach" to the problem of heritage preservation.

And city archivist Ainslie Helmcken said if the B.C. Land Building was to be considered and designated a heritage structure, "everything else on Government Street would have to be declared historic."

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall issued the stop-work order Tuesday afternoon, under the terms of the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act.

Deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace explained today that the order applies only to the B.C. Land Building itself, and not to the remainder of the 1.5-acre property which has been assembled for the multi-million-dollar Nordal Mall development.

But even before the order was posted, preliminary demolition work which began Tuesday morning had been halted on instructions of city engineer Jim Garnett.

'Contrary to Safe Practice'

This was done, Garnett explained today, because a demolition permit had not been issued, and in any case workmen engaged in the task Tuesday morning were dismantling and removing fixtures "in a manner contrary to good, safe practice."

Plans for the Nordal project, which is to include condominium suites, offices and a shopping mall linking Government and Wharf, are now being redrawn after the city's Advisory Design Panel expressed dislike of the earlier concept.

Initial land assembly was undertaken by the Nordal family of Victoria, the original development submission was from Vancouver developers Rosborough, Southam and Kornberg and the Calgary-based development firm now involved in Cascade Developments Ltd.

The Calgary firm's principals could not be reached for comment today.

Gorst told the Times the object of halting demolition was to enable a survey of the building's historical importance to the community. He said the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act provides for the compensation of an owner who feels his property value has been diminished — as the legislation states "in an amount to be determined by the Lieutenant Governor in Council."

Bawlf said the city of Victoria more than any other municipality in B.C. has shown a keen interest in preserving its heritage structures, but it is denied "the proper tools for the job" by a government which ignores repeated requests to strengthen and improve existing heritage legislation.

"We have a plethora of legislation on this subject and none of it adequate," he added.

Bawlf said the property owners' agreement to sell is jeopardized by the freeze, and there appears to be no recourse but to await "the whim of the minister."

COLA Clause Catching On

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

COLA has arrived.

Not in a big way. But the inroad has been made.

COLA is the abbreviation for Cost of Living Allowance — clauses in collective agreements designed to cushion the impact of spiralling costs.

As recently as 1971, the research and planning branch of the B.C. labor department had records of only four contracts covering 600 workers with COLAs.

Two years later, there were only six COLAs covering 1,350 workers.

But in the first half of 1974, it is estimated that at least 30 contracts covering more than 100,000 employees contain COLA clauses.

The most popular COLA formula says that for each specified point increase in the national Consumer Price Index, there will be a cent, or number of cents, per hour increase in wages.

Other features of COLA clauses include a trigger — requiring a minimum price increase before the formula is activated; a cap — setting the maximum wages can rise; and a computation period, usually quarterly, to determine when payments will be made.

COLA clauses are still relatively uncommon, not only in B.C., but also on a national basis where one report estimates 20 per cent of major contracts have this feature.

The labor department's research branch, after comparing the advantages and disadvantages of using either the Vancouver or national price index for COLA clauses, notes that neither are exact indicators of price fluctuations.

"But they, unfortunately, get injected into precise formulations. Whether this is to the advantage or disadvantage of employees or employers, there will be discrepancies between the ideal and the reality," the branch says in a report on COLAs.

The report notes that "often employers argue against COLAs entirely" saying that negotiated increases in the basic wage are for anticipated cost-of-living changes.

"However, as with most economic indicators such as the CPI, one is required to predict the future by extending past ant method, resultant rancor in worker-employer relations can be expected."

'Twins' Coming Here

Victoria formalizes its "twin" relationship with the city of Napier New Zealand, next week when it plays host to a party of 18 Napier residents headed by Mayor Peter Tait.

The visit, from Wednesday through Sunday, reciprocates the earlier visit by Mayor Peter Pollen to the "down under" city last February.

The party will be welcomed at a reception in The Empress Wednesday evening, and a civic dinner is planned for Friday.

During Pollen's stay in Napier he was presented with a memento, the intricately carved stern of a Maori war canoe, which now occupies a corner of his office waiting room. In exchange, he presented a totem carved by Indian earver Tony Hunt.

Saanich Staff Exempted

No Saanich municipal employee will have to reveal to council his financial interests and property holdings.

Most aldermen said Tuesday they wouldn't want to see the information even if it was volunteered.

All except Ald. Mel Couvelier voted not to require municipal employees to list their holdings under provisions of the new Public Officials and Employees Disclosures Act.

Couvelier said the provisions of the act were "designed to protect the public welfare" and councils were the "sole custodians of the public welfare.

"I feel most strongly the responsibility is ours and ours alone. If we don't face up to it we would be negligent. Distasteful as it may be I see it as my public duty. We must protect the public's interest and put ourselves in the position of doing that."

Ald. Fred Severson said he had no objection to filing information, as required of elected officials, by Sept. 15, but didn't think municipal employees should do the same.

"I have nothing to declare," he said, "I'm prepared to lay it on the table. It's a funny thing, many political people didn't like it, yet we are saying some of our staff should do it. Strange situation.

"I think the question of land holdings is very important. I think it's up to their conscience. It's up to an individual to bring it to the council if he thinks he should."

"I'm of the opinion we shouldn't force our staff to any disclosure," he said, "I'll not support employees having to disclose."

Under the act, elected officials must register their land holdings within the district where they live and the names of all companies or corporations in which they own one or more shares.

This information is open to the public but similar information filed by employees is available only to council members.

Extension Asked On Bow Season

Saanich council wants to extend the bow and arrow hunting season for deer to March 1.

Mayor Ed Lum told council Tuesday the season opened Aug. 24 and, instead of keeping it to the usual three months the provincial fish and wildlife branch will seek provincial cabinet approval for an extension.

Farmers and nurserymen have complained of crop losses to deer which number about 2,000.

Ald. Sandy Noel said he hoped this would not let loose "a bunch of little Robin Hoods," adding:

"I know a well-placed arrow can be lethal. I've seen a lot of deer killed in my life but a misplaced shot could injure a deer that could run many days and die a lingering death."

Ald. Mel Couvelier suggested an arrow with a tranquilizer might be a better solution.

Lum said indiscriminate shooting by bow and arrow would not be allowed. Archers will have to have a provincial licence as well as permission from property owners to shoot on their land.

Student in PJs Tops UVic Line

A first-year University of Victoria student today was successful in beating the annual cheek-to-jowl registration line-ups — and he did it with pyjamas.

UVic officials report that one male student maintained the much-coveted first of the line registration position by spending the night in a pup tent.

The tent appeared late Tuesday night and its occupant emerged early this morning in pyjamas while hunlreds of not-so-anxious first-year applicants were lining up behind.

Registration officers cleared away hundreds of applicants Tuesday in the education and professional year faculties and today first and second year students are following time-consuming procedure in preparation for start of the academic year Monday.

Music and fifth year students to register Thursday and those entering third and four years on Friday.
those entering third and four years on Friday.

Many out-of-town students are also using this week to obtain accommodation for the academic year and housing officer Shirley Baker said the campus housing office is managing to keep ahead of the demand.

"I don't sense the kind of urgency other universities (in the East) are experiencing," she said, adding however that room and board rates for students this year have increased from last year's $110 a month average to $130.

Tank Farm Move Rejected

The provincial government has apparently turned down Victoria's suggestion that the unsightly tank farm on the Songhees industrial reserve be relocated to the west side of Esquimalt Harbor, Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday.

Pollen said he has received a letter from a deputy minister—whom he wouldn't identify—indicating that the DND property eyed as an alternative site for the tank installations is too ecologically important to be used for that purpose.

The official stated that the property in question was a treed area required for the expansion of Fort Rodd Hill Park, and also considered important in terms of waterfowl and marine life conservation.

Pollen said the only solution offered by the letter was the suggestion that the best possible site for oil storage tanks was in an area where natural values had long since been destroyed—in other words "leave them where they are and perhaps landscape them a little."

With heavy sarcasm, the mayor added: "This is a really aggressive well-informed, very biased, very senior civil servant who has taken it upon himself to enunciate policy and tell us what we should be discussing."

And that was the only provincial response so far to the city's request for the government to press federal authorities for the use of the DND property, he added.

Two Hurt But Fire Halted On Mt. Finlayson

Rocks and other debris tumbling down precipitous Mount Finlayson put two firefighters in hospital Tuesday but the fire burning over the rugged western slope has been "captained."

The hottest part of the two-day blaze was at the base of the mountain beside Goldstream Park this morning but Ranger Marsh Antonelli said bush surrounding it has been smeared with "red mud" fire retardant.

With a little luck the 60-acre fire will be at the mop-up stage by tonight, he said.

★

From the outset Monday afternoon, firefighters have had to contend with boulders and burning snags rolling down on them from the western slope, which in places is too steep to climb.

Also in good condition at Victoria General Hospital is Len Floker, 44, of Colwood, who received a broken hand and cuts to his neck when hit by "tumbling debris."

The fire, which came within about a quarter-mile of a handful of houses on Finlayson Arm Road Tuesday, was stopped at that point.

Antonelli said a fire guard has been bulldozed across the top of Mount Finlayson.

The A 26 water bombers were dropping their 800-gallon loads on a hot spot high on the mountain slope at the northern rim of the fire today.

A 60-man crew is fighting the blaze. It got some help from sporadic showers and cooler temperatures. For the second day there was little wind in the fire area.

It was on Skirt Mountain seven years ago that the two-man crew of a Canso water bomber was killed when the plane clipped the tip of a tree and crashed.

The fire started Monday afternoon beside a hiking trail to the popular summit lookout. Firefighters speculate it was started by a careless smoker.

Pollen, Bawlf Roast Second Gov't Freeze

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The provincial government's second development "freeze" in downtown Victoria—this time on the demolition of the B.C. Land Building in the 900-block Government Street—drew an angry response today from city officials.

Mayor Peter Pollen denounced the move as another example of "growing government be decreee, in response to really irrational demands by politicians such as Gorst Esquimalt NDP MLA Jim Gorst) who are making hay out of heritage."

Ald. Sam Bawlf, city council's arch-preservationist of old buildings, condemned the government for taking a "back-door approach" to the problem of heritage preservation.

And city archivist Ainslie Helmcken said if the B.C. Land Building was to be considered and designated a heritage structure, "everything else on Government Street would have to be declared historic."

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall issued the stop-work order Tuesday afternoon, under the terms of the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act.

Deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace explained today that the order applies only to the B.C. Land Building itself, and not to the remainder of the 1.5-acre property which has been assembled for the multi-million-dollar Nordal Mall development.

But even before the order was posted, preliminary demolition work which began Tuesday morning had been halted on instructions of city engineer Jim Garnett.

'Contrary to Safe Practice'

This was done, Garnett explained today, because a demolition permit had not been issued, and in any case workmen engaged in the task Tuesday morning were dismantling and removing fixtures "in a manner contrary to good, safe practice."

Plans for the Nordal project, which is to include condominium suites, offices and a shopping mall linking Government and Wharf, are now being redrawn after the city's Advisory Design Panel expressed dislike of the earlier concept.

Initial land assembly was undertaken by the Nordal family of Victoria, the original development submission was from Vancouver developers Rosborough, Southam and Kornberg and the Calgary-based development firm now involved in Cascade Developments Ltd.

The Calgary firm's principals could not be reached for comment today.

Gorst told the Times the object of halting demolition was to enable a survey of the building's historical importance to the community. He said the Archaeological and Historic Sites Protection Act provides for the compensation of an owner who feels his property value has been diminished — as the legislation states "in an amount to be determined by the Lieutenant Governor in Council."

Bawlf said the city of Victoria more than any other municipality in B.C. has shown a keen interest in preserving its heritage structures, but it is denied "the proper tools for the job" by a government which ignores repeated requests to strengthen and improve existing heritage legislation.

"We have a plethora of legislation on this subject and none of it adequate," he added.

Bawlf said the property owners' agreement to sell is jeopardized by the freeze, and there appears to be no recourse but to await "the whim of the minister."

COLA Clause Catching On

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

COLA has arrived.

Not in a big way. But the inroad has been made.

COLA is the abbreviation for Cost of Living Allowance — clauses in collective agreements designed to cushion the impact of spiralling costs.

As recently as 1971, the research and planning branch of the B.C. labor department had records of only four contracts covering 600 workers with COLAs.

Two years later, there were only six COLAs covering 1,350 workers.

But in the first half of 1974, it is estimated that at least 30 contracts covering more than 100,000 employees contain COLA clauses.

The most popular COLA formula says that for each specified point increase in the national Consumer Price Index, there will be a cent, or number of cents, per hour increase in wages.

Other features of COLA clauses include a trigger — requiring a minimum price increase before the formula is activated; a cap — setting the maximum wages can rise; and a computation period, usually quarterly, to determine when payments will be made.

COLA clauses are still relatively uncommon, not only in B.C., but also on a national basis where one report estimates 20 per cent of major contracts have this feature.

The labor department's research branch, after comparing the advantages and disadvantages of using either the Vancouver or national price index for COLA clauses, notes that neither are exact indicators of price fluctuations.

"But they, unfortunately, get injected into precise formulations. Whether this is to the advantage or disadvantage of employees or employers, there will be discrepancies between the ideal and the reality," the branch says in a report on COLAs.

The report notes that "often employers argue against COLAs entirely" saying that negotiated increases in the basic wage are for anticipated cost-of-living changes.

"However, as with most economic indicators such as the CPI, one is required to predict the future by extending past ant method, resultant rancor in worker-employer relations can be expected."

'Twins' Coming Here

Victoria formalizes its "twin" relationship with the city of Napier New Zealand, next week when it plays host to a party of 18 Napier residents headed by Mayor Peter Tait.

The visit, from Wednesday through Sunday, reciprocates the earlier visit by Mayor Peter Pollen to the "down under" city last February.

The party will be welcomed at a reception in The Empress Wednesday evening, and a civic dinner is planned for Friday.

During Pollen's stay in Napier he was presented with a memento, the intricately carved stern of a Maori war canoe, which now occupies a corner of his office waiting room. In exchange, he presented a totem carved by Indian carver Tony Hunt.

DR. SPOCK

SPOCK SERIES SLATED

At a time when the whole concept of family life, social and political structures, the ideals we have long believed in, and disciplines of every sort are under severe attack—particularly by the younger generation—a 10-part series by the world's most eminent pediatrician and children's psychiatrist, Dr. Benjamin Spock, will appear in The Times Family Section starting next Saturday, Sept. 7.

Without resorting to cant or dogma and always advocating instinct over theory, encouraging the power and value of love and the sense of giving, the Spock series shows how tested principles of human relationships still pertain in a new and changing world; how mutual respect between parent and child can be established and maintained, and how the nuclear family can remain as a central, steadying base in a time of shift and change.

Spock has been writing about children since 1946. Baby and Child Care, his first book, has sold 24 million copies and has been translated into 26 languages.

The shortage of apartment space in the Victoria area has reached what municipal leaders call "crisis proportions."

Vacancy Rate Almost Nil

"Construction of apartments for rent has virtually come to a halt in the Victoria area," says Chris Dowling, local manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The vacancy rate is almost nil.

"A few builders are still putting up condominiums but there is no interest at all in rental apartment construction," Dowling said.

"I would be surprised to see any more large rental projects under present conditions."

The conditions in part are due to federal taxation changes but mainly are centred on a concern about the provincial government's 8 per cent rent increase limit.

"Money has no particular social conscience," Mayor Peter Pollen said today. "It will go where it can get a return on its investment. The provincial government's policies are discouraging private construction."

The effect of the provincial government's attitude is reflected in the construction figures.

Apartment construction across Canada is down 15 per cent from last year due to a shortage of mortgage funds and the end of the federal tax benefits for investing in apartments.

Construction Starts Down

However, in Victoria apartment construction starts this year are down 41 per cent from 1973. Other B.C. cities report a similar trend.

"I have come to the conclusion that the 8 per cent limit must be removed," says Saanich Mayor Ed Lam.

"The only solution to the housing crisis is to lift the 8 per cent ceiling to allow developers a fair return. This would encourage apartment construction.

"There should be some ceiling, but with the rate of inflation running at 12 per cent or more, an 8 per cent ceiling is not reasonable."

The official count shows that you can expect to find only one vacancy in a 200-suite apartment building. And you have to move quickly.

These appeared in Tuesday's Times:

"Emergency! It's the street for us . . ."

"$50 reward to finder of house, duplex or suite . . ."

"Help! Mother and six children desperately need . . ."

Many Renters Desperate

There were 15 ads by people desperately needing a house to rent and another 10 seeking an apartment. A year ago no one would think of advertising for an apartment. They didn't have to.

However, Tuesday there were only 15 ads offering unfurnished apartments to rent, down from 62 ads on the same day in 1973.

There were 10 ads offering furnished apartments, down from 34 a year ago.

The apartment shortage is even worse than it appears on the surface. While 1,046 apartment units were started in the Greater Victoria area this year, almost all of them were for condominiums, not for rent.

However, the total includes a 38-unit condominium in Esquimalt and a 30-unit condominium in Victoria.

Contributing to the apartment shortage is the conversion rate to condominiums. Apartments can be constructed for sale as condominiums, but special permission must be granted by the municipality before an existing rental apartment can be converted to a condominium.

In that connection, Mayor Lum has bad news for apartment owners.

Tough Stand in Saanich

"While the present crisis continues, Saanich will take a very tough stand with owners trying to convert rental units to strata title (condominiums). The shortage is bad enough as it is."

He said Saanich city hall is receiving a large number of calls from people seeking rental accommodations and he has to tell them there is virtually nothing available.

The shortage is most acute at the University of Victoria where there are only 600 beds in dormitories and a student waiting list of 500.

"We stopped taking applications in May and there are a lot more than 500 students looking for accommodation," says Shirley Baker, co-ordinator of student housing.

About 300 rooms have been located in houses in the area but some students are going to have to travel across town, some from as far away as Colwood.

"The response from the public has been gratifying but we still need more rooms," she said.

Elsewhere in the city any rental accommodation is being snapped up as quickly as it becomes available, particularly if the rent is below $200.

MUSK OX FOR MOSCOW

MONTREAL (CP) — Ten musk oxen from the Canadian Arctic are to be flown to the Soviet Union today, the first step of a Soviet attempt to reintroduce the species in Siberia.

The six female and four male oxen will be set free on Siberia's Taymyr peninsula. Musk oxen have been extinct in the Soviet Union for 2,000 years.

It is expected the oxen will survive in Siberia, becoming a source of meat and wool for the natives of the peninsula. About 10,000 oxen live under similar conditions on the Canadian Arctic islands off Ellesmere, Melville and Banks.

Munro Handling Grain?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro today made a "public plea for rationality" among employers and 550 grain handlers in a deadlocked labor dispute that has blocked the flow of grain from this west coast port since Aug. 26.

The minister told a news conference he will continue to meet with parties that have a direct interest in the dispute before returning to Ottawa today but he would not identify to whom he will be talking.

He also reiterated the federal government's stand that parliament will not be called into session before the scheduled Sept. 30 to legislate an end to the dispute.

"I'm not issuing a plea on one hand and a threat on the other," said the minister who was accompanied on his trip here by his deputy Tom Eberlee.

Munro called on the Grain Workers Union and the five elevator companies to take a more rational, dispassionate look at the report prepared by conciliator Dr. Neil Perry.

If the dispute drags on until Parliament opens, the outcome is a foregone conclusion because the government has committed itself to the recommendations of the Perry report.

The minister said that if the grain companies intend to procrastinate and wait for Parliament to implement the conditions of the Perry report to embarrass the Liberals, "the government is prepared to be embarrassed."

Asked if the government has plans to take over grain handling, Munro said that possibility has been looked at but not endorsed.

Metro Stays Closed

MONTREAL (CP) — Traffic on city streets was slow again today following the return to classes of 230,000 public school students in the absence of subway service.

Only 1,375 of the city's 1,900 buses were on the roads because of the 29-day walkout by maintenance workers, a transit commission spokesman said, adding that there will definitely be no subway service until the 1,600 workers return to work.

A police spokesman said there were no more road accidents than usual because of the strike although traffic, especially in the city's east end, was bad.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission (MUCTC) said more than 10,000 public school students were without bus transportation because the commission faces a shortage of buses and cannot spare enough for them.

Meanwhile, a provincial labor department spokesman said Tuesday the Quebec government has no immediate plans to pass legislation to end the strike.

The strikers already have defied a Quebec Superior Court injunction ordering them back to work. The union and some of its members were fined $54,050 for contempt of court for disobeying the Aug. 8 injunction.

The spokesman said commission lawyers will seek additional contempt of court charges against 23 union members previously fined.

The commission has refused the union's request to reopen negotiations on a wage contract which does not expire until July 1975. The men currently earn between $3.50 and $5.50.

The almost month-long strike has sent an estimated 500,000 people who use the subway daily scurrying to find alternate means of transportation. About one million people use the transit system daily.

Meanwhile, Toronto's 23-day transit strike ended today but a bristling new issue immediately sprouted.

Several workers have grown beards during the 23-day layoff and plan to return to the job with them. But the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) frowns on beards.

Most of the 5,700 members of Division 113, Amalgamated Transit Union, took part in secret balloting Tuesday. Of the 4,838 members who voted, 78 per cent were in favor of returning to work.

Commission officials reported that full service resumed by 6 a.m. today, although subway trains might be less frequent than normal during peak hours. All-night bus, tram and trolley routes started at midnight Tuesday night.

For four days, the workers had defied a law passed in the Ontario legislature ordering them back to work. Whether the TTC will seek permission from the Ontario Labor Relations Board to prosecute the workers individually or the union as a whole was still unanswered Tuesday night.

'Fun Gun' Upsets Police

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — "The salesman calls it a "fun gun" but Vancouver police are suspicious of the customers to whose sense of humor it may appeal.

However, because it only fires them one at a time the gun is officially in the same class as semi-automatic hunting rifles—and sales of the $195 gun are legal.

Gunstore proprietor Al Peters, who has sold three of the weapons, suggests they will be used to mutilate tin cans in the bush.

With the price of ammunition for the gun at $15 for 50 rounds, however, this would be an expensive pastime.

It's a deadly looking weapon, but there is nothing illegal about it, a police officer said Tuesday.

The .45 calibre gun has two hand grips, an ammunition clip with 30 rounds and is 37 inches long. It is made in Knoxville, Tennessee, by Commando Arms Inc. which claims to have sold 16,000 of the guns in the past four years.

The Vancouver police official said the Commando Mark III is the same gun converted by Symbionese Liberation Army into an automatic weapon, a claim denied by the manufacturer of the gun.

The gun is being sold as a hunting rifle the police official said, "But I can't see what use it could be to any hunter."

Turkey Vows Reprisals For Cyprus Massacres

Times News Services

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — More bodies were dug up today from a grave at the Turkish-Cypriot village of Maratha, and the Turks reported two more massacres in which they said 158 Turkish-Cypriots may have died.

Officers of the United Nations peace force counting skulls removed from a garbage pit outside Maratha said 84 men, women and children had been buried in the grave. Survivors in the village 12 miles northwest of Famagusta said the victims were Turkish-Cypriots slain by Greek-Cypriot gunmen.

The Greek-Cypriot government of President Glafkos Clerides contended that the corpses might be those of Greek-Cypriots missing in the district. A Nicosia newspaper said a medallion found on one of the bodies belonged to a Greek-Cypriot woman who lived six miles from Maratha and was missing with her seven-year-old son.

A Greek Cypriot spokesman charged the Turks with a "desperate effort to divert the attention of world opinion from the suffering and evils brought about by their invasion of Cyprus."

The spokesman said, however, the Greek Cypriots are "willing to provide any facility to the United Nations for an on-the-spot investigation, in the presence of representatives from both sides."

Turkish-Cypriot defence minister, Osman Orek, told reporters he has been informed of two more alleged massacres.

He said 96 Turkish-Cypriots were missing from villages near the south coast and were believed buried in Palodhia, but Greek-Cypriot police there refused to let UN investigators search for the grave.

Orek also said that he has information that 62 Turkish-Cypriot civilians from Timi, west of Limassol, have been killed and buried in that area.

The Clerides government has called for an independent investigation by the UN force and the International Red Cross of all atrocity reports, and vice-President Rauf Denktash, the leader of the Turkish-Cypriot community, said he would welcome the inquiry. But nothing has been done about getting it started.

Relative calm returned to this city of 400,000 about midnight Tuesday night.

Police said about 15 stores were looted Tuesday as bands of youths, most of them Puerto Rican, rampaged through the streets.

JURY BLAMES DEAD TEEN

Driver 'Bugged Into' Death Drag Race

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A 20-year-old Saanich man said Tuesday he was "bugged into" a high speed drag race on the Pat Bay Highway in which three young people were killed Aug. 10.

"I did it to get away from them," Brian Allen Murphy, 3220 Quadra, told a coroner's jury inquiring into the deaths of Paul Young, 17, of Lower Kippens, Nfld., Daga Lucian Tower, 17, of 1412 Taunton, and Janice Moyes, 16, of 121 Kamloops.

Murphy said the youths had followed him as he drove north on the highway shortly after 3:30 a.m. inciting him to drag by changing from one lane to another, gunning the motor and flashing headlights.

He said when he turned around at Elk Lake to come back home the car sped up alongside him.

"I became really annoyed, so I stepped on the gas," he said.

The two cars, reaching speeds Murphy estimated at 90 mph, raced neck and neck until just before the Royal Oak overpass when he slowed down and then watched the death car veer out of control into a rock wall.

The two woman, four man jury determined Paul Young, the presumed driver of the car, was criminally negligent in the operation of the vehicle.

They cited dangerous driving on the part of Murphy but added the race was "a result of harassment by the driver of the Olds (the death car) and its occupants."

The jury deliberated one hour before delivering findings to Coroner Edmond St. Jorre at five minutes past midnight. It followed a four hour hearing which centered mainly on Murphy's testimony.

The inquest was into its third day after having been adjourned Aug. 26.

Murphy said he first saw the trio driving in a 1967 Oldsmobile in the Town and Country parking lot.

"They were squealing tires and making asses of themselves," he said.

He left the lot when he heard a number of cars had collected for drag races on the highway near Vanalman and went to watch.

However, the rumor proved false so he decided "to take a run out the highway".

"That's when the Olds pulled up beside me. The driver started to jump his car — putting his foot on the gas pedal to make it jump — and challenge me to a drag."

He sped away from the car twice, he said, then did a U-turn in the road at Elk Lake.

"The Olds passed me doing about a 100 mph, went through an amber flashing light, and out of sight. I headed back home."

He had not gone far when the Olds was along side him again.

"I heard screaming. I didn't know what was going on. The driver kept bouncing the front end of his car."

He said he "tried to get away, but the Olds kept up with him.

On the downward sweep to the Royal Oak overpass he said he slowed, fearing a radar trap on the other side of the bridge.

He estimated he was 300 yards behind the Olds when it crashed.

"I don't know whether the driver was trying to switch lanes or what. When the car hit there were pieces flying everywhere."

His testimony varied from that of Darlene Evelyn Anderson, the driver of a car the two had passed on the highway.

She said the cars raced past her when she was opposite the Royal Oak Inn and saw both disappear together around the corner under the overpass.

She arrived seconds later.
